GOD BLESS THE HOME

God bless the home, though humble, So full of love's sweet light; God bless the little children, With their sweet faces bright; God bless the mother tender, God bless the father, too; God make us fond and faithful, God keep us kind and true.

God bless the home, where daily The songs of praise arise; Where all kneel round the altar, And offer sacrifice. Alas! for homes where never Is heard the voice of prayer; Alas! for homes when Jesus Is never mentioned there!

Alas! for homes, where sorrow Like night must ever brood; Where children lack for clothing, And for their daily food. God bless the home he gives us, The home that gave us birth; God keep us fond and faithful, And make it heav'n on earth.

The Year 1924

The year 1924 A. D. is a leap year of 366 days. Of the Jewish era it is the 5685th; of the Mohammedan the 1343rd. Since the beginning of the Reformation it is the 407th, and since the beginning of American independence it is the 148th.

Eclipses

In the year 1924 there will be five eclipses, three of the sun and two of the moon, all invisible in the United States.

- 1. A total eclipse of the moon, February 20th.
- 2. A partial eclipse of the sun, March 5th.
- 3. A partial eclipse of the sun, July 31st.
- 4. A total eclipse of the moon, August 14th.
- 5. A partial eclipse of the sun, August 30th.

A transit of Mercury over the sun's disk will take place May 17, 1924. The ingress will be visible throughout the central part of North America, the egress only in the extreme northwestern part.

When Captain Ambler Changed His Mind

BY JOSIAH SWETT

"Hum! Are the men all in their dotage, that the firm has to put a youngster in as skipper of the finest schooner out o' port?" Captain Luther Ambler, of the Morning Star, tossed his head disgustedly. "Twenty-three-year-old an' skipper of a schooner just off the ways! It ain't the way business was carried on when I was a young man. In them days a boy was kicked an' cuffed 'bout the deck until he was twenty. Then he roughed it for a half a dozen year afore the mast. After that, if he had the right stuff in him— the right stuff, mind ye—he might be made second mate. Now they make 'em cap'n as soon as they know the difference twixt a schooner an' a liner!"

"Cap'n, ye don't seem to realize that times has changed since ye was a young man," remarked John Cunningham, mate of the Lucy Price.

"Guess there ain't nobody that realizes it more'n me!" snorted the captain. "Ain't I just been tellin' ye how different things is today from what they was forty year ago? Then the boys had education knocked into 'em. Now a professor hands it to 'em in a school-room."

Up to within a few days of the complete fitting out of the Flying Cloud, Captain Ambler had felt reasonably sure that he would be given command of the new schooner. He had been in the employ of the company a longer period of time than any other skipper and his record was unstained by the loss of any vessel. Such being the case, it was not strange that he thought that he was the logical candidate for the position. Hence his wrath when he learned that Ezra Morse, mate of the Lucy Price, had been appointed captain of the new schooner.

The facts of the case were that Ezra Morse was an exceptionally capable mariner. He had demonstrated this to the company when, as first mate of the Lucy Price, he had brought the schooner unharmed through a gale on Georges Bank, a hurricane which raised havoc in general with the fishing fleet, being forced to take command of the vessel owing to the fact that the captain was confined to his bunk with a broken leg.

The following week the Morning Star sailed for Georges Bank and on the next tide the Flying Cloud cast off and followed. Both vessels made a lively passage down the coast and in due time dropped anchor on the fishing grounds. For a week the weather was fine and the fishing excellent. Then, one morning late in September, the barometer showed indications of foul weather.

Up the coast from Hatteras came at a merry clip a hurricane. When it reached Georges Bank it was ready to do business on a big scale and it started in at once.

Captain Morse had sized the situation up well some hours before the gale swept down upon his vessel, and had made everything as snug as possible. It was not long before he was very thankful that such was the case. "Wetting our lee rail a bit, Jack?" questioned the captain, addressing the mate, who had just come below.

"Looks that way," replied Jack Carton, pulling off his rubber boots and emptying considerable water out of them. "Deck was all awash a minute ago. If I hadn't had a good grip on the fore tacks, I would have been carried overboard."

"It's a genuine sou'easter, and no mistake," remarked the captain. "It's a good thing that we have ample roadline out. It would be bad business to drag and drift onto the shoals with things as they are. Georges Shoals are only about ten miles north of us."

Captain Morse and Carton took turns at the watch that night. Lashed to the rigging, they watched until daybreak while the storm increased in fury. Carton affirmed that it was the worst night he had put in in twenty years.

Out of the grey mist of the early morning loomed a schooner. Her mainmast was missing and her rigging snarled and tattered. When Captain Morse first sighted her, she was quarter of a mile to the south.

"That's the Morning Star!" ejaculated the captain, looking at the vessel through his marine glasses. "She has had a hard night of it. She has lost both anchors."

"She'll be on the shoals inside of an hour!" cried Carton, who likewise had seen the distressed vessel.

"All hands on deck!" roared Captain Morse. "Jack, get that hawser ready."

"Up with the anchors, lads!"

The Morning Star was rapidly approaching and long before the anchors were weighed, was passing some 200 yards to the eastward.

"Keep your horn sounding!" yelled Captain Morse, holding his hands to his mouth. "Keep it sounding! We're getting under way!

"Unfurl the jib, Jack. That's about all she'll stand."

As the second anchor came to the surface, Captain Morse shouted his warning.

"Hang on, lads, for your lives. We'll be right on our beam ends for a minute."

As he brought the schooner up before the wind, she heeled over frightfully, but a moment later righted and was off. The Morning Star had disappeared from sight, but her fog horn could be heard, and following the sound, the Flying Cloud shortly located her. Sailing up to the windward of the vessel, Captain Morse brought his schooner alongside and the hawser was drawn aboard.

"Your anchors won't hold both of us!" shouted Captain Ambler. "Take us aboard and let my vessel go."

"Not on your life!" replied Captain Morse. "You've got too good a vessel to lose. We're going to tow you into port."

"Port! We're eighty mile from Nantucket!" roared Captain Ambler as the Flying Cloud got under way and the hawser straightened out. "There ain't more'n one captain in 100 that can make port in this gale!"

"I'm that one!" cried Captain Morse, as he brought his vessel around. "We'll make Edgartown Harbor before dark!"

Heading his vessel so as to pass just to the south of Asia Rip, some sixty miles to the west, the Flying Cloud now steadied somewhat by her tow, Captain Morse put on a bit more sail.

"Lee rail is getting a bit damp, lads!" chuckled Captain Morse as the schooner plowed through the tumultuous seas. "What do you say, Jack, to running up the mainsail?"

"Not if you want to stay on top of the water, Cap'n," laughed the

"Guess you are right," replied the captain grinning as the Flying
Cloud buried her nose and a big sea flooded the deck.

Keeping true to his course, Captain Morse sent his vessel by Asia Rip shortly before noon and then, changing his course, headed for Mukeget Channel. With a fairer wind the Flying Cloud gathered speed and early in the afternoon was shooting between Muskeget Island and Chappaquiddick Island, Captain Morse cunningly avoiding the numerous shoals which threatened on each side. At three o'clock the Flying Cloud rounded Cape Poge and an hour later dropped anchor in Edgartown Harbor.

"We're here!" shouted Captain Morse to Captain Ambler, who had relinquished the wheel and had come to the bow of his vessel.

"I see we are," laughed Captain Ambler. "How did ye do it? That's what I want to know."

"Just kept my eyes peeled for the light-houses and buoys."

"Ever been in here before?"

"No, Cap'n."

"Ye haven't? How did ye know your way?"

"Oh, I studied the chart a bit," replied Captain Morse. "Thought it might come in handy some day to know how to make a snug harbor in case of a bad blow off on the bank."

"Well, Cap'n, it sure came in handy today, at least to my vessel," said Captain Ambler soberly.

The following day, having secured another set of anchors, the storm passing, the Morning Star set sail again for Georges Bank, accompanied by the Flying Cloud. True, the former vessel was minus one mast, but she made fair progress and the following afternoon both schooners dropped anchor on the fishing ground.

For three weeks the weather held good and at the end of that time, both vessels having secured big fares of fish, started for home.

"Never mind me," said Captain Ambler the morning that they weighed anchor. "We'll limp back to port somehow."

But Captain Morse did "mind" the Morning Star, unfurling only a small portion of the Flying Cloud's canvas, so as to keep pace with the crippled schooner. It was five days before the two vessels rounded Eastern Point and sailed into Gloucester Harbor.

"Mr. Kimball, I have got a few words I want to say to ye right here on the wharf," said Captain Ambler as he stepped ashore, addressing the head of the company which owned the Morning Star. "When I left here I wasn't feeling any too good-natured. Thought that I ought to have been app'inted master o' the Flying Cloud. Said right here on the wharf that it was a curious way o' doin' business to put a boy in as skipper o' the best schooner the company owns. I had an idea that Cap'n Morse knew precious little 'bout navigation. Well, sir, I've changed my mind. He snatched the Morning Star right from the jaws o' death, as ye might say, took her in tow in a seventy-mile an hour gale. Set sail for Edgartown, nigh a hundred mile away. Rounded Asia Rip and sailed up Muskeget Channel, dodging in and out among the shoals, passing Chappaquiddick Island like an express train going by West Gloucester depot; rounded Cape Poge and dropped anchor. Mr. Kimball, I couldn't have done it in that hurricane to save my life."

CAN THE DEAD COME BACK?

More than a generation ago William E. Gladstone, the famous British statesman of the nineteenth century, said that spiritualistic phenomena would be the most important subject for scientific investigation in the twentieth century. Recent developments seem to indicate that he was right. Ever since the war, with its millions of tragic bereavements all over the world, a new interest has been manifested in the possibility of communicating with the dead.

But after all, there is nothing strange about this fact. Some time ago L. S. Bull, Egyptologist at the University of Chicago, said in an address before the American Oriental Society that spirit hecklers were familiar to the Egyptians nearly four thousand years ago.

The idea is, therefore, not new. All ancient history is full of some kind of manifestations of Spiritualism, from Croesus, king of ancient Lydia, to Clement of Rome, well known father of the ancient church who, when yet a heathen, and troubled about the immortality of the soul, went down to Egypt "to inquire from a magician and induce him with a large sum of money to call up a soul from hades by the art which is termed necromancy." In the same book he enumerates the wonders of Simon the magician mentioned in Acts 8:9-24 and says "he produces phantoms of every conceivable shape, causes vessels in the house to be moved about, rolls himself upon fire and is not burned, and sometimes he even flies."

Those who have taken pains to investigate honestly and scientifically the so-called manifestations of Spiritualism tell us that nine-tenths of it is deliberate deception by means of all sorts of devices which can be easily used in the dim and mysterious light by which all spiritualistic seances are conducted. Perhaps the most convincing expose of how the swindlers work is that made in the Saturday Evening Post early in 1922, in which "A Wig-maker" makes some very remarkable reverence.

lations as to how so-called spiritualists ply their trade and dupe their victims." This is what he learned about it from his own experience:

"This gang of spiritualistic swindlers worked in a most systematic way. They had an advance man and woman on the road, experts in getting into the good graces of small-town people and in bestowing sympathy. If they read of the death of a wealthy or prominent man they would go to that town and stop at the hotel, often at a boarding house. By casual inquiry they would learn of the habits of the deceased man and work around until they got an introduction to the widow or other relatives. Eventually they would call at the home on some pretense of business and talk sympathetically to the bereaved. Their main object was to get a photograph. Often they ingratiated themselves so well as to be permitted to take a camera snapshot of an enlarged portrait, if that were necessary. Anyway, they got a photograph.

"In the meantime they would pick up a few incidents in the life of the departed—somehing that could be used to sound familiar to the bereaved; some simple remark or question that the medium could use later to inspire awe and conviction in the minds of the victims.

"While one expert worked on the wealthy family, the other would locate photographs and facts about the recently deceased of less prominence. The conversation would gradually lead to spiritualism. The bereaved would grasp at this straw half the time, the former faker told me. If the person was wealthy and shrank from publicity the victim was told that arrangements could be made for a private seance in the home. This would be expensive, of course, but in a case like that, the victim was told, money should not figure. Every influence would be brought upon a great medium that the come-on man knew to bring him to this town and to a private seance.

"The trick was really turned when the photograph was secured. This photograph would be mailed to me by special delivery, with instructions to express the wig at the earliest possible moment. The information as to past incidents and personal mannerisms they would save for the arch faker, the great medium. When I learned these things I began to understand why the orders came from so many towns.

"Upon arrival the great medium would study the photograph, which I always returned with the wig, and proceed to make himself up. He always painted his face so as to give it an unearthly pallor. The slightest resemblance to the deceased, under the circumstances, would answer the purpose.

"Often these swindlers would stay in a town a week or ten days, causing the people to gossip and gasp in wonder. Half of them believed implicity in the genuiness of the seance.

"If the bereft was wealthy and gullible, the crooks would work on that person until they had milked every nickel possible, giving one seance after another in private. I know of one widow who was swindled out of five thousand dollars. I have learned of wealthy families in the big cities being swindled for four times that amount.

"You may rest assured that I make no more wigs for spiritualistic fakers. Just the same, they still get them."

Much sadder than this method of fraud is that which results in moral downfall, of which multitudes of cases could be quoted from the daily press, if space permitted. One of the most unfortunate was related some time ago by a well-known paper in the Middle West. The case was that of a man whom we shall call Short, who was employed in a department store in a larger city in that section of the country. A young woman named Margaret worked in the same store. Short lived out in the suburbs in a bungalow with his wife and daughter. He was in good circumstances and the family seemed to be happy.

Short and Margaret became interested in one another and in Spiritualism, as did also the others of Short's family. They took up spirits together and claim they began to receive messages from the other world. It was not long before Short as he claimed, received messages to the effect that Margaret was his "perfect medium" and that he should marry her so that he could receive messages from he other world. Mrs. Short claims to have received the same message and was perfectly willing to have the spirit messages carried out, nor did Miss Short object to two mothers at all.

The story as it came out when Short was tried for bigamy was that Mrs. Short "suffered a spiritualistic death, when her spirit passed out of her body and some other spirit entered it." About a month afterward Short and Margaret were married, with Miss Short as witness. While the ceremony was being performed the first Mrs. Short was at home cooking the wedding supper. Short took his second wife home to his first wife and the two and the daughter were living happily in the "love nest" when Margaret's parents searching for them two days later discovered them and caused Short's arrest.

There is a book entitled "A New Gospel to All Peoples," for which the author, Dr. Marie Stopes, claims divine guidance in setting forth her theories of birth control. She explains that the revelation came to her in June 1920, and that she was told by the voice from the spirit world to "say to my bishops" what is found in the pages of the book. At the conclusion of the message she arose, went home and immediately sent for her secretary. There and then without going into the house she redictated what had been dictated to her. The message was then printed and a copy sent to each of the bishops of the Anglican Church and the Protestant Episcopal Church in America, then assembled for the Lambeth Conference.

The bishops, however, gave no publicity to her message, so she has printed it for the benefit of everyone. The message proceeds to develop Dr. Stopes' doctrines in terms that fully explain the unwillingness of the bishops to make them the subject for public discussions. The official report of the Lambeth Conference, however, make clear very emphatically, in discussing modern movements "that Spiritualism is incompatible with fundamental church doctrines." Christian Science and Theosophy are also included in this category. On Spiritualism the report says: "While prepared to expect and welcome new light from psychical research upon the powers and processes of the spirit of man, we urge strongly that a larger place should be given in the teaching of the church to the explanation of the true grounds of Christian belief, eternal life and immortality. While recognizing the results of investigation which encouraged many people to find spiritual meaning and purpose in human life and lead them to believe in survival after death, grave dangers are seen in the tendency to make a religion of Spiritualism. The practice of Spiritualism as a faith involves subordination of the intelligence and will to unknown forces of personality and to that extent is an abdication of self-control."

A rather amusing illustration of this "subordination of the intelligence and will" came to light some time ago in the St. Louis court of criminal corrections, when a man and his wife who formerly were in the business of calling up departed spirits for regular and transient customers at so much a call, promised to the judges that they would thereafter confine their labors to the things of the flesh. A jury had just fined them $100 after hearing testimony concerning a seance held at the home of the couple during which a police woman testified concerning the appearence of "Brother Bill, deceased," although she never had a brother named Bill, but did have orders to watch for fortune tellers.

The practice of consulting familiar spirits was forbidden by the Mosaic law, Lev. 19: 31; 20: 6, 27; Deut. 18: 11. King Saul put this away early in his reign but consults the witch Endor who had a familiar spirit, 1 Sam. 28: 3, 7. In his very valuable booklet, "Spiritualism—Divine? Devilish? Or a Deception? Which?" which can be secured through Eden Publishing House, St. Louis, Dr. Biederwolf refers to the claim of spiritualists that God called up Samuel in this instance, and they quote it as a divine warrant for the practice. That God has anything to do with the business, however, is not at all likely for several reasons, among which the two following are entirely conclusive: 1. The teaching of Spiritualism is un-Christian out and out and utterly subversive of the Christian faith, and therefore God cannot be a party to it. 2. God plainly forbids Spiritualism in Scripture, and he is not going to encourage what he has forbidden on pain of death.

If God had any part in the dealings of Saul with the famous witch of Endor it must be noted that Saul was a God-forsaken man. He knew the dealers with familiar spirits were reputed to call up the dead and he had gone to one of them and told her to call up Samuel the prophet. Now the Bible does not say that Samuel was seen at all by Saul. But the Bible does say that Samuel spoke to Saul, and if it was really the spirit of Samuel then he came not in response to the medium's call but God in his anger cut the procedure short with a sudden interference and sent up the real Samuel. This is supported by the fact that the witch was scared out of her wits when she saw the real Samuel instead of the counterfeit which she expected to palm off on poor old Saul.

If this view, which seems quite plausible and most reasonable, is correct, it is the only case on record where God so acted; and if he did so act in this case it was for a specific divine purpose and gives no warrant for believing that he is running a perpetual bureau for this sort of business so that any old hag can secure his services to call up the dead on any occasion or for any purpose whatsoever.

In his very illuminating discussion of Spiritualism in the devotional exercises during the conference of the Missouri District, 1923, (Luke 24: 37—"They supposed that they beheld a spirit.") Prof. Baur pointed out that when the risen Lord appeared to his disciples he stood before them in a glorified body. They understood this as little as we do. It was something altogether new, an absolutely unheard-of experience. It is quite natural that they should explain the remarkable appearance according to the popular notion that the dead could reppear as spirits or ghosts. Thus there lives in mankind the vague idea of a transfigured body, but it is a caricature of truth, not truth itself.

A DANGEROUS DECEIT

The deceit which is implied in these words of Scripture, the belief in ghosts, is as old as humanity Today the spiritualists are its chief representative. This superstitution is much more dangerous today than in pre-Christian times, for today we enjoy the revelation of God in Christ and should, therefore, have done away with this erroneous idea already hoary with age. Did not Christ become manifest in order to destroy the works of the devil? And Spiritualism is indeed a work of the devil. Or are we not saying too much? Let us see.

Many believe that Spiritualism is just a common fraud and that modern jugglers could imitate all the tricks of the mediums. But there must be more to it, or the Bible would not warn against it so earnestly. There is surely fraud connected with it, but who commits it? The Bible traces it back to Satan, who is a liar and the father thereof. Spiritualists deny the divinity of Christ; they will not believe in the Son of God who was made flesh; they claim that Jesus was a spiritual medium, and a social reformer. At the present time he is said to be a spirit who has progressed to the sixth sphere! Spiritualism also denies the biblical teaching of the atonement through the blood of Christ. Each one, they say, must atone for his own sin by repentance, suffering and restitution. This is said to take place even after death when a gradual progressive moral improvement takes place!

According to spiritualists the Holy Spirit, the comforter, is the spirit of any departed person who comfort those who remain behind. According to them there is no evil spirit, no Satan! This superstitution directly contradicts the Bible, the inspiration of which by the Holy Spirit is impiously denied. Of course spiritualism with its unclean hands also pollutes the practice of prayer. In the opinion of spiritualists the praying person attracts spirits (pure African paganism); if a suitable medium is present, the prayer is answered!

NECESSITY AND CURIOSITY

Spiritualism is also very dangerous because it claims to help us understand the miracles of the Bible and to teach us not to despair in times of need. Let us remember the state of mind of those who have just lost someone near and dear to them. In such cases faith is often greatly shaken, calm judgement is impossible, the nerves are shattered, and the poor human heart is open to whisperings of the powers of the evil. To that is added curiosity, which seeks to know what God in his wisdom has hidden from us or merely intimated. There are examples of persons who have approached Spiritualism in the interest of science and have gradually been drawn into snares. Many, especially the so-called mediums (mostly women), lose their minds because their nerves break down; many are led into immoralities because spiritualism thinks little of marriage; all finally in some way arrive at unbelief, as they believe the so-called spirits more than they do God and His word. Our text speaks truely because the disciples in truth did not see a spirit but the risen Lord. We know this because we have absolutely true historical testimony. The gospels are entirely credible reports of the life, suffering, death, and resurrection of our Lord. We may, therefore, joyfully proclaim that the disciples actually saw Christ their risen Lord

What he did and what the apostles did was not done in an obscure corner and does not need to fear the light of honest investigation. We need to call up neither the Lord nor his witnesses from the life beyond the grave in order to understand the teachings of the Gospel. In our hearts we have the testimony of the Holy Spirit that for Christ's sake we are children of God and that, with all our sins and imperfections, in spite of all the tragic and offensive things which still cling to Christians to this very hour, there is not lacking the demonstration of the Spirit and of power. In proof of this it is only necessary to ask any faithful pastor, any missionary at home or abroad.

The Christian services of worship are open to all; they take place in full view of the public. We need no secret meetings and have no ghastly ghost stories to tell. We have Moses and the prophets, yea, even more, we have him of whom Moses and all the prophets bear witness, our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, crucified and risen from the dead, the Son of God and Son of Man; all the writings of the apostles bear witness of him and through the testimony of the risen Lord the cause of Christ has made its way in the world. We human beings are not purely spiritual. Spirit and matter are combined in our nature in a most wonderful manner. In spite of its artistic genius the old Grecian view of the world did not know what to do with the human body. They preserved it in stone and marble and have become our teachers in this art until this very day; but that the human body should rise again from the dead they could not understand. it was foolishness to them until they learned to believe in the risen Lord. Then they began to understand the human body and they recognized that which remained of it. In this way they found the whole truth, and only on this basis could Christianity gain a foothold in the world; only a religion which promises that heart and flesh may cry out, sing for joy unto the living God, has power to triumph over all other views of life. It was something of this which the disciples experienced in that moment when they noticed that is was not a ghost that stood before them, but a perfect human personality with body and soul. Therefore they were glad when they saw the Lord!

A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

There are many good Christian people who in a moment of temtation or weakness fell in with spiritualism and its mediums and have learned through their own experience how very dangerous it is to meddle with. One of these, a member of an Evangelical church, has put his experience in writing in order to make clear to others who may be similarly tempted the danger they are facing. He says: "The son of plain Christian parents, I was brought up as a Christian and also confirmed in the Evangelical Church, but later became associated with Socialists and atheists and lost my belief in God and everlasting life after death. I did not care about nor even think of God. I sank very low through Satan's temptations. During this time I experienced great trouble and misery. One day an acquaintance introduced me to a so-called 'medium' among the spiritualists. My curiosity was aroused in regard to their revelations. I learned that this medium, a woman, was connected with an Indian spirit. For special information she would get into a trance. In case I wished for success in my life I was told I must think of the Indian Spirit.

"In the seance one would hear the most impossible and terrifying things. The spirit control who gave the message, would say to those who doubted that he would make them have a headache with a sledge-hammer. When asked whether my mother in Europe, of whom, on account of the war, I had not heard for a long time, was dead, I was told yes. Two years later, after the war, I learned that she was still alive. On one occasion I was told that my wife was sick at home, which was found untrue when I came home.

"The meetings, which I first attended from curiosity, are always in a dark room, dimly lighted. The medium appears as if in a faint and walks about among the audience. The people listen and ask their questions; usually only one or two do this. In the seance I attended there were usually from 20 to 30 persons and an offering was taken for the benefit of the church, as they call it. The meetings are not advertised but the believers pass out the information secretly. The medium often lives in squalid hovels or basements and is given to filthy habits and on the side seeks to deceive and defraud people by occult knowledge about their past. Evidently the medium simulates the trance and having surrendered herself to evil spirits she hears them in many strange communications. They teach young girls who want their fortune told to study occult sciences. This makes them susceptible to nervous excitement so that they learn to hear voices. They easily become 'dope fiends' and thus are hopelessly lost.

"Many books have been written about spiritualism, but I never read any of them because I soon became suspicious and felt that following up the information I had gathered was merely giving Satan a still greater chance to claim me as his own. There may be good spirits, but I never met them in the seance, while many of the evil kind showed their evil nature as soon as the name of Christ was mentioned by profanity and blasphemy, experiences which are also related by many missionaries to heathen lands.

"There are several state organizations of spiritualists and they have their regular literature. The members pay dues, from 25 to 50 cents per month. A lucrative income is also derived from individual seances held privately at the homes, which of course are expensive, ranging all the way from five or ten dollars to what they think they are able to get. I found no satisfaction in these seances and reasoned that if spirits can come back and talk to us there must be life after death, and if there is, then Jesus Christ also still lives. So I made up my mind to give up Spiritualism and return to the religion I had been taught in my youth.

"So after six years of wandering I went again to listen to a Christian sermon. What now follows is the absolute truth. I came home from church filled with repentant thoughts and questioning whether God would forgive me. Suddenly I heard a voice. Greatly shocked, I asked who it was. My wife had died two months before. From my experience with spiritualists I spoke to the voice. Without seeing anybody I heard a voice say distinctly, 'Do not be afraid, I am in darkness among bad spirits that torment me. Assist me that I may rise higher.' At intervals I heard other voices. I again started to ask questions. Many voices began to speak and I got excited by their number. I soon knew that the spirits were bad. What I heard was mean and silly. But I actually could not free myself from hearing. I thought I was near insanity. But I had all my mental powers. It was just as the Apostle Paul says: (Eph. 6:12) 'For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.'

"After being troubled for several days by these demons, I went to see the medium in order to find out what I should do to get rid of them. I described to the medium the immoral character of these spirits; she said they were low spirits to whom I should not answer. Besides, she told me that my deceased wife was among them and I had to help her to develop higher. But it was no use, whether I answered or not I was continually molested by spirits named Hulda and Oscar. I also heard others. I tried hard to hear better spirits, but all in vain. I found out that I was surrounded by demons and heard nothing but uncleanness and lies.

"I started to read books against Spiritualism, but it did me no good. Suddenly I got the idea from God's Word to stand by Jesus Christ. So I told the spirits that I would serve Jesus and no one else and keep to God's word: 'Resist the devil and he will flee from you,' James 4: 7, and I held to the promise of our Lord. 'Lo, I am with you always, unto the end of the world.' So I fought against the attacks of the demons with God's Word and did my very best to live a Christian life. I prayed a good deal, tho I still was a sinner. But God's Word came true, 'As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked: but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die?' Ezek. 33: 11.

"For months I suffered dreadfully under the attacks of these demons. So I prayed to God for help. I often seemed to hear the rage of the devil because I did not forsake Jesus and His Word. I got back my strength of former days to do my work. I fought the attacks of the demons day and night. In this period I had a vision at night, when half asleep and half awake—a heavenly apparition with kind but serious features. I received this assurance: 'Continue as you are, I shall always help you.'

"Dear reader, I was firmly convinced by this that God had given me a proof that He had accepted me. He is almighty to save us from the power of the devil. From now on the demons that pursued me changed their tactics, to advise me about the way to serve the Lord and explain to me the words of the Bible. Those whom I knew as liars and whom I had heard for years blaspheme God and His holy Son,-actually thought I lacked in piety. They wanted to make me believe that forgiveness of sin would only be granted to me for good deeds and not by the grace and the blood of our Lord Jesus. They promised to let me become an illustrious medium, to give me strength to do miracles, if I would renounce Jesus Christ. But I resisted them. I had found out their devilish ways. Consequently, dear reader, I was saved by Jesus Christ from the fetters of the devil. I trusted in the power of our God. I was in the darkness. I am now in the light by the grace of my Saviour Jesus Christ, who died for us and rose again.

"I beg you, dear reader, if you have not yet felt the grace and power of our Saviour Jesus, to believe and to be born again, do come to Him. Keep away from the Spiritualists, those helpmates of the demons, that you may not have the struggles I have had. Receive Jesus, and He will give you all the blessings you soul might long for. By the grace of God and by the mediation of our Saviour Jesus Christ you will receive the Holy Spirit of truth. He will lead you in His wisdom, and keep you from the devil and his lying demons and blinded mediums."

Dr. J. Godfrey Rauport, lecturer and theologian, asserts that he has known many women ruined utterly in body and soul by the immoralities urged upon them by spirits when their will-power has been destroyed by opening the door of their minds to these evil suggestions. If people read the daily papers they will find many articles where men and women through influence of these spirits go through sad troubles, and even take their lives. Dr Winsford, the Oxfort lecture on mental diseases, says: "The prevalence of madness due to Spiritualism is on the increase." "Almighty God!" cried a spiritualist who was once a Christian: "Can I ever get back my faith?" Yes, you may get it back; pray to God through Jesus Christ the Saviour and listen to his blessed Spirit, and he will guide you out of all darkness. We have the Lord's promise: "Call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee and thou shalt glorify me.-I warn you,dear reader, if you value your peace of mind and the salvation of your immortal soul, stay away from so-called Spiritualism.

STATISTICS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES IN THE UNITED STATES, 1922

In the following we publish again the census of religious bodies in the United States as compiled by the Federal Council and published in the Year Book of the Churches 1922-23. For lack of space all denominations reporting less than 100 churches have been omitted. These churches, however, are included in the grand total given at the bottom of the table. Denominations affiliated with the Federal Council are designated by an asterisk. The United Lutheran Church is affiliated only as a consultative body. The Protestant Episcopal Church is represented in the Federal Council only by its Commissions on Christian Unity and Social Service.

The figures are to some extent necessarily incorrect, as the fiscal year of the different denominations varies, which makes it impossible to bring the denominations to a fairly comparable basis. No effort was spared to get the latest available figures as nearly as of even date as possible.

(See Table on next three pages.)

Gains for the Past Year

The following table will show total gains as compared with statistics reported in the Year Book of the Churches for 1921:

the five years preceding. The same is true of the gain in ministers (7.6%). The total gain in membership (2.56%) is decidedly the best gain numerically in recent years. The reoprts from the different denominations vary widely in what is included in amount of money raised. The inquiry aimed to secure figures of all money raised for all purposes, but many answers gave only "general benevolences," and some only local budget.

Growth as Compared with That of the Population

Comparison of the church membership of the United States with the reports of the census on the population since 1890 shows a steady advance of the church membership over the population. In 1890 the church membership was 34% of the population; in 1922 it was 45%.

A Study of Religious Statistics—Constituency

The definition of the term "constituency" is varied. Defining it as "all those who by birthright, affiliation, or sympathetic interest as well as actual enrolled membership hold some form of denominational religious faith," careful study of the population of the United States has brought some good statisticians to the conclusion that the figures of the Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox, and Latter Day Saints presented in the Year Book represent "constituency." No regular plan of enrollment appears to be followed by Jewish synagogs, some counting only heads of families and others only heads of families who are pewholders, since, therefore, all who have not renounced the Jewish faith among those of Jewish blood may strictly be counted as Jewish constituency, a multiple of four is fair, though rather low, upon the reported membership of Jewish synagogs. It is somewhat harder to get a fair multiple for Protestant bodies, but Dr. Walter Laidlaw, of New York, who has had large experience as statistician of the New York Federation of Churches and in the Census Bureau of the United States, has demonstrated through varied tests that a multiple of 2.8 upon Protestant membership figures is approximately correct. Some such calculation is necessary to bring the figures to a comparable basis. It is altogether misleading, for example, to say that there are 18,104,804 Roman Catholics, 400,000 Jews and 28,902,447 Protestants in a total of 47,407,251 reported membership, a ratio of 1:1.5, while the one represents population as officially stated and the other is communicant membership. The calculation below shows a ratio of 1:4.3 as between Roman Catholic and Protestant population in the United States; this means that for every one of Roman Catholic there are four and three tenths of Protestant faith. The approximate ratios to total population are 18 Roman Catholics, 77 Protestants, 3 other faiths and 10 of no faith.

Seven Largest Protestant Groups

The seven larger Protestant denominational groups in order of numbers are Methodists, 8,262,289; Baptists, 8,167,353; Lutherans, 2,515,662; Presbyterians, 2,402,392; Disciples, 1,218,849; Protestant Episcopal, 1,118,396; Congregationalists 838,271.

EXCAVATING THE HOME TOWN OF ABRAHAM

"Reports of the discovery of the ruins of an ancient tower at Kish in Mesopotamia coupled with slightly earlier discoveries at 'Ur of the Chaldees,' home city of Abraham, bring into the foreground mention of regions and facts long known through the Bible," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"The pick and shovel already have carried secular history back to the period of the eleventh chapter of Genesis, have found evidence to reconstruct the daily life of the times of Abraham, and have revealed the essential differences of customs in the Tigris and Euphrates delta from those of King Tut's time along the Nile," continues the bulletin. "The familiar story of the tower of Babel gives the clue to one such difference. In the Biblical narrative the children of Noah said to one another, 'Let us build us a city, and a tower.'

"The temples of Egypt had a succession of chambers on the ground level; characteristic of a Babylonian temple were its chambers arranged vertically, each successive story being a little smaller than the one beneath. In modern parlance, Egyptians tended toward bungalow architecture; the Babylonians had the first skyscrapers.

"One, then, may picture Babylonia of Abraham's time as a land dotted with busy towns, each walled around with brick, and having a tower as pretentious as it could afford.

Rooms Like Pullman Cars

"The writer of Genesis makes another significant statement when he records that these early Semitic peoples 'had brick for stone, and slime they had for mortar.' There being no stone in this region the use of brick was universal, and this absence of both stone and wood had a marked influence upon the dwellings. Roof-beams were scarce, hence the rooms were long and narrow, even in the palace of the city's priest-king, which usually adjoined the tower.

"Politically, Babylon was not yet a nation. Ur, Umma and Lagash were city-states comparable in their pride and prowess to Florence, Venice, and Milan of medieval Europe.

"How they came to clash is easily understood by noting their plan. In the center were tower and palace, around these were dwellings, and this cluster of buildings was rimmed with cultivated land. Beyond this cultivated belt was the pasture land, netted with irrigation canals, always held in common. As the towns grew and more grazing land was needed trouble arose. 'And there was a strife between the herdmen of Arabham's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle.'

Contrast to Egyptian Life

"The contrast between this town life period of Babylonia and the Empire of Egypt was as great as that between our own New England communities of the mid-eighteenth century and the regal splendor of France under Louis XIV.

"This 'small town' period of Babylonia disappeared, however, with the conquests of Sargon, King of Akkad (not the Assyrian) who ruled nearly 2,500 years before Tutankhamen was interred.

"Further explorations among the remains of the city of Abraham probably will be secondary to the greatest single find in this region—the code of Hammaurabi. This scholarly king ruled in Babylon about 2,300 B. C., and the laws he codified are proof of a high civilization built up through many centuries before his time.

"Occasional reports of a new find in Mesopotamia, the cradle land of our civilization, give an impression that modern knowledge of the Babylonians and Assyrians is sketchy. On the contrary, from thousands of clay tablets which have been recovered and read, the 2000-year span from Sargon, down through Hammurabi and Tiglath-Pileser, to Ashurbanipal, can be sketched more completely and accurately than the annals of many comparatively modern states.

"The interest these records hold for modern man lies in the fact that, while many latter-day customs, ideals, and modes of thought date back to Jewish life of Old Testament times, these Jewish ideas were derived, in turn, from the far earlier Babylonian civilization.

"One of the surprises these clay documents afford are the striking likenesses of a civilization of 4,000 years ago to that of the twentieth century.

"One scholar avers that 'a right-thinking citizen of a modern city would probably feel more at home in ancient Babylon than in medieval Europe' because 'in Babylonia life in Abraham's time was practically as thoroughly organized and as carefully regulated as it is in our own.'

Abraham in Middle Ages of History

"Another astounding revelation of these writings, according to Albert T. Clay, is that Israel, instead of being one of the foremost nations of antiquity, was a small power, relatively inconspicuous. Moreover, instead of the Patriarch, Abraham, belonging to the beginning of time, humanly considered, it is now found that he occupies a middle chapter in the history of mankind.

"But above all else,' this writer continues, 'one of the greatest surprises is that the earliest peoples, instead of being barbarous and uncultured, were civilized and possessed a culture of a higher order. In fact, the greatest creations of the Babylonians in literature and art belong to the third and fourth, and perhaps earlier millenniums before Christ.'

Wine Merchants Supervised

"Even the ills of present day civilization existed in Babylon. Raids on gay road-house parties were common. Wine selling was regulated and the enforcement was put squarely up to the vender. One section of the penal code provided, "If a wine merchant has allowed riotous characters to assemble in her house, and those riotous characters (she) has not seized and driven to the palace, that wine merchant shall be put to death.

"A maid might sue for breach of promise, a landholder had to pay a heavier tax if he did not cultivate his allotment, guardians were provided for estates of widows and orphans.

Notaries and Oaths 4000 Years Ago

"Formal contracts and deeds had to be attested by a notary, and in swearing the person taking the oath raised his right hand. An official copy of the transaction, on a clay tablet, with the notary's attestation was deposited in the temple, the court house of those days.

"There was an excellent reason for paying one's rent promptly in Babylon, for creditors could seize one of the debtor's household for a hostage and hold him until a satisfactory settlement was made. Interest rates were rather discouraging, also, 'the usual rate' referred to on clay tablets being 20 percent. Instead of a penalty of 10 per cent as provided in modern notes if legal steps must be taken to collect, Babylonian notes provided for the doubling of the debbt.

"Mounds and occasional masses of brick work laid bare by winter rains, and ditches which hint at the canals of an elaborate irrigation system, are the only surface traces left in Lower Mesopotamia today of this splendid civilization."

A COSTLY AFFAIR

BY ELIZABETH P. ALLEN

The new mistress of that brand new house on Park avenue was tripping down the softly carpeted Queen Anne stairway, to her first breakfast in her new home. She had hurried down before her new husband (bless me what spick and spanness!) to see that everything was in order; opening the door of the breakfast room, first; giving a loving, dainty touch to its shining array of bridal silver, and then hastening on to the library. This was the cosiest room of all. True, there wasn't much "library" about it yet, for all of Mr. Winston's books, and all of hers, could not be made to fill many shelves. But there was her pretty, tall escritoire, and Mr. Winston's writing table, and the amusingly new dictionary on its jaunty stand and-oh, there was library enough, and it was a dear, pretty room, with a friendly little coal fire glowing out a warm welcome at her. The bride looked smilingly content, and yet a trifle anxious too; else, why that pucker between the pretty brows? And what was she looking for? Ah, here it is, a little bell, with an image of some queer old heathen idol for a handle. She opens the door, and tinkles the bell sharply in the hall, while her color comes and goes. Almost immediately her domestic appears, having clapped a clean white apron on top of a checked gingham one, of less immaculate character.

"Sit down, Martha," says the lady, nervously. "Frank-I mean Mr. Winston, will be down directly, and we will have prayers."

But Martha was nervous too; she took her seat on the edge of a chair that never was meant, I think, to be sat on, and edged this chair so close to the wall as to endanger seriously the stamped leather paper. Then she pulled one finger after another until she had cracked all her joints. Still Mr. Winston did not appear.

"I'll just tell you the truth, Mis' Winston," she burst out at last: "I don't like this thing of comin' to prayers. I'm a first-class cook, and I know I can give satisfaction in my meats and fancy breads, and I haven't been brought up religious, and I don't take to it. Why, I ain't seen the inside of a church this five year, and as for prayers, none of my families ever asked it of me before."

"But would you have us take God's good gifts like dumb brutes, Martha," said the new house mistress, her voice trembling with the effort it cost her, "and give him no thanks?"

"Oh, I ain't raisin' no objection to prayers," answered the cook, with the free and easy tone of an American-born servant; "fact is, I wouldn't think as much of you if you didn't have 'em; quality folks mostly does; but I feel queer, an' like a fish out o' water ,when I ain't in my own kitchen."

"Very well," said the new mistress a little hurriedly, for she heard Frank shut the chamber door upstairs, "I only ask you to try it for a week; after that you may do as you choose."

"Good morning, Martha," said the gentleman gaily, as he came in. "Well, Mrs. W., is my congregation ready?"

His tone was rather light, perhaps; but the new duty embarrassed him, and he took this altogether masculine way of hiding his embarrassment. When Letty had first proposed setting up a family altar, Mr. Winston had demurred, laughed at her a little, asked why their individual prayers wouldn't do, called her a superstitious child, but finally yielded to her entreaty that their new home might be placed under the shadow of the sweet sanctities belonging to both old homes.

And having yielded the point, he made up his mind to be gracious about it, and do the thing in the best possible style. That was part of his nature. Frank Winston never willingly made any one uncomfortable, though he was a careless fellow on the whole. Martha, for her part, was much impressed with the rich, sonorous voice, as he read with faultless elocution the story of the child Jesus, and still more so by the fervent and far-reaching petitions. That both tone and words were conventional habits of mind and speech inherited, or acquired by unconscious imitation, she could not possibly know. But there was never a word more about her staying away from morning prayers; she allowed no domestic exigency to keep her away, and her keen though undeveloped intelligence was aroused to a lively interest in the reading and prayers, which was to prove a surprise to both master and mistress.

One of the newnesses enjoyed by the young wife was the shining condition of the kitchen. Coming from the South, where the Negro cooks held absolute sway in their domains, and where the old pots and pans had done service for a lifetime, Mrs. Winston had not imagined that a kitchen could be such a thing of beauty. She was always making the excuse of "trying a new recipe," to spend a morning hour with Martha. And Martha, being essentially sociable, was well pleased with her company.

"Who is sick, Mis' Winston?" she inquired on one of these occasions when mistress and maid were sitting together, their knees under the white oil-cloth covered table.

"Sick? I don't know, I'm sure; why do you think anybody is sick, Martha?"

"Didn't Mr. Winston pray for him this morning?" asked the domestic in reproachful surprise. "I thought he seemed mighty sort of anxious about the Lord raisin' him up off his sick bed."

"Yes, yes," agreed the mistress hastily; "so he did." But she had a secret, shame-faced consciousness that Frank hadn't meant anything in particular by that well-rounded sentence about the "sick and the afflicted."

"I wish you'd please ask Mr. Frank who it is, Mis' Winston," was Marthas' next startling request; "cause this is my afternoon out, and I thought I might take him a glass of that calf's foot jelly. It's more'n you all is going to eat 'fore you're tired of it, and that prayer has been runnin' in my head all day; seems as if I wanted to do something for the poor fellow myself."

Mrs. Winston told her husband when he came to lunch, and they joked over it a little, but with some constraint.

"Your maid takes morning prayers with uncomfortable literalness," said the young man; "perhaps it would be better if we did the same. Oh, by the way, there is a sick man in our congregation; I stepped into Mr. Stuart's office to engage half of the window, you know, and I had to wait a few minutes while he and a brother deacon consulted about giving help from the church fund to a carpenter, a man named Brooks, who broke his leg yesterday."

"Oh, well, that will satisfy Martha," said Mrs. Winston eagerly; I hated her to think—to know, that is—"

"Yes, it would be a pity for her to know how little we think or feel what we say at prayers," agreed her husband honestly.

So Brooks, the carpenter, stopped the gap very well. Martha told him that he was prayed for at her house, and told Mrs. Winston that she had told him, and this time they joked still more faintly about it, and the gentleman said they had Brook's faith on their consciences now; Brooks wouldn't believe in their prayers, unless they followed them up by more tangible help. Of course, the help followed, and their connection with the Brookses established a sort of domestic mission between the new house on Park avenue and the rickety tenement on Tanner street. And now Mr. Winston began to have a livelier consciousness of what he did mean when he came with his petitions to the Almighty.

But careful as he set himself to be Martha's next innocent bomb exploded in heat of his affairs. The new home on Park avenue was getting ready for what its master called a "blow-out," which sadly slang phrase seemed to mean a large entertainment—large, to judge by the time mistress and maid spent stoning raisins and cutting up citron for fruit-cake. Martha entered heartily into the festive spirit of the occasion and as she attacked the last green sugary lobe, she proffered the request that the blinds in the back should be left up "just a teenty mite," enough for her to see the assembled company.

"Of course, you shall see the people," agreed her mistress gleefully, "if I have to walk them all around by the back windows myself."

"I specially want to see Mr. Frank's brother and his wife," confessed Martha. "Susan Parks has been 'lowing to me that they beat my folks for looks, and I've been 'lowing they don't. So now's my chance to get even with Susan."

But what was this? Mrs. Winston's face flushed an angry color, her eyes looked forbidding, and the pleasant smile vanished from her lips as if a whirlwind had caught it.

"Mr. Winston's brother will not be here, Martha," she said stiffly, "nor his wife; they have both behaved very badly to us and we never expect to invite them to the house."

Martha dropped the citron, and the knife, and her hands and her under jaw; it looked for a minute as if she meant to drop her mistress's acquaintance, from the stillness of surprise that came over her. Then she shut her eyes, and repeated, in a clear imitation of Mr. Winston's resonant tone, "Forgive us our offenses, O Lord, this day, even as we, obeying thy command and following thy blessed example, do this day strive to forgive all who may have offended or injured us."

Martha opened her eyes when she had finished her quotation and fell upon her citron vengefully. But she opened her lips no more that day, except in answer to a question. And when the little silver bell rang for prayers the next morning, no Martha appeared. Mr. Winston waited a few minutes, and look inquiringly at his wife.

"We will have prayers without Martha this morning," she said hesitatingly; "I'll see about it another time."

"Is it one of her practical jokes on us?" asked the gentleman.

But when inquiry was made, the domestic declined to come to prayers any more, and also declined to give her reason. Then Mrs. Winston confessed with considerable trepidation, what had passed between them, over the kitchen table. What if Frank should fly in a rage, and order Martha off on the spot! Just before the party, too! Mr. Winston looked red enough in the face, when he heard the quotation from himself, to have done even such a desperate thing as that; but he tried to meet it in his old, light way.

"See here, Letty," he said, "we've either got to get rid of this woman, or—or" his voice suddenly lost its banter, and he spoke with great feeling, "or we've got to set about living nearer to our prayers!"

It was the evening of the entertainment at the new house on Park avenue. Mrs. Winston came shimmering into the kitchen with her pretty white satin gown and slippers on; why not? There wasn't a cleaner floor in her house. "Martha," she said shame-facedly. "I have left the blinds up in the back parlor, and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Winston have promised to come early, so don't miss seeing them."

"Lord bless you, honey!" said the cook, her grumness disappearing like a snow wreath in April. The hired waiters from "Bonsacks" stood around in their high-and-mightiness and wondered what it all meant; but Martha knew, and the guardian angels of the new home, who had come unbidden to the feast—though they had not heard the story then,—knew how sweet and pleasant it was beginning to be for brethren to dwell together in peace and unity.

The family were a little late in coming down to prayers the next morning after the "blow-out," and when the husband and wife opened the library door there sat Martha, waiting for them against the wall, in white apron, and radiant smile, and something very like tears in her old eyes.

"CAST NOT AWAY YOUR CONFIDENCE"

HEBREWS 10: 35 (A. V.)

The year 1923 has brought to the nations of the world as much as did any of its older sisters. The news from all over the world have been read with great anxiety. Will better, calmer times never come? Can peace and happiness never find their way back into the family of nations? Is it really possible that neighbors fighting among themselves in Europe can keep the whole world in restlessness and anxiety? Are the peoples of the earth actually so closely related to one another that the words: "And whether one member suffereth, all the members suffer with it" become true here also? How long, O Lord, how long must we wait until thy sun, which in thy mercy has risen day after day on the just and the unjust, proclaims the morning which will show to confidence in the eternal Father and to the confidence of men in one another and in intercourse with one another, the way out of this black and gruesome night!

Many voices have loudly inquired, and just as many have thought of the question without expressing it: "Is it possible that a just and righteous God should look down upon the terrible confusion which now prevails among men without interfering and re-establishing justice and righteousness in the land? And in doing this each one has had in mind his own personal idea of righteousness. But the year has not brought the quietness and order earnestly hoped for in the hearts of millions of men. On the contrary, the peoples who as allies wanted to and did follow common aims and purposes have been eyeing each other suspiciously and each has begun to go his own way. How long? Until their preparations for war which are increasing in an unbelievable manner, meet at the cross roads. Only a few of the great leaders of nations appeal again and again to the world, this wonderful creation of God, with new confidence, and seek to bring about an acceptable understanding between divided and rival peoples, between subjugated and oppressed nations. They must be regarded as messengers of God.

But the eternal God has not cast away his confidence in his world to this moment. He still pours out his blessings as he has always done. Our fields and pastures bear witness thereof. And he is patiently waiting until at last his love and mercy shall win. At any hour he is ready to begin over again with the individual who returns to him from a far country, like the prodigal son to his father. At any hour he is also ready to open the way for new fraternity and mutual confidence among the nations, as soon as these in all confidence seek him as mediator and guide.

No wonder that in the midst of such an international ferment Christendom should also be strongly affected both in its world-wide aspect and in its particular groupings. No one can expect that in times like these the vineyard of our Lord should bring forth fruit a hundred-foid. Distress and suspicion, envy and revolution, little faith and unbelief, have done their injury, to the root, the blossom, and the fruit.

In our Synod also much has turned out differently than had been hoped for. Still, we have every reason to say to one another, Cast not away your confidence. In spite of differences of opinions the brethren are often more brotherly than appears upon the surface. Our work has made more progress than was expected. In the seminaries, the heart chambers of our Synod, we find great activity. The class rooms are filled. The new dormitory at Elmhurst has been completed and is in use. A new institution has been opened in Robinson, Texas, which, when it has passed through the years of childhood ailments, promises abundant success and blessing.

Eden Seminary begins a new period in its history. The old and greatly antiquated building has been sold, and a new location has been purchased for a new Eden; even now diligent hands are hard at work on the new building. Our mission work at home and in heathen lands goes forth unceasingly. Our Sunday school workers gathered in large numbers for a national convention, and a few weeks later almost as many workers assembled in four different training schools in order to become better equipped for their work of teaching. More than 600 women met in July at Elmhurst, to receive new inspiration concerning women's work in the Kingdom of God.

And our gifts for the Kingdom of God? Not all of those which should have come in did come in. You, dear reader, will know whether or not your gift was included among those that did come in, and you will know how it tallies with your petition: "Thy will be done." The doing of the will of God is the fulfillment of the petition: "The Kingdom come!" You have prayed for both, did you not? Have you also done as you prayed? Can you then expect that God shall hear your petition?

Nevertheless the Synod has received twice as much in material support from the congregations for carrying on its work for the Kingdom as was raised three and four years ago. Cast not away your confidence! By no means will we doubt that we as a church have a call, a talent and a task. By no means will we doubt the great faithfulness of God, the eternal Father, who will surely work with us whom he has called as his workers toward blessed, beautiful and fruitful growth of his Kingdom.

Let us not lose courage! The ghastly shadows of evil in the world, the mutterings of little faith and of stubbornness, of suspicion and unbelief must not disturb us. The day must come when all of us shall approach the Father in full confidence to ask for and to receive his paternal blessings for heart and home, for our calling, and our ministry. Cast not away your confidence! It carries with it the blessing for a new year of labor which God may graciously bestow upon us.

J. Baltzer, President General.

Our Educational Institutions

The Seminary Board is endeavoring conscientiously and as speedily as possible to solve many difficult problems in the interest of our educational institutions. Among the most loyal and liberal supporters of our church are many readers of the Year Book who will welcome the following information and who will gladly accept the challenge which it presents.

New Eden

The present property has been sold to the Normandy School District for the sum of $200,000. This action was taken after all Districts had voted their approval and after the Executive Officers of the Synod had authorized the sale. The old Seminary building will be used as a high school and we are gratified to know that it will continue to serve educational purposes. The agreement has been made with the Normandy School District whereby we are privileged to use the building, and also the professor's dwellings, for another year without having to pay rent for the same. This is a happy arrangement which saves us much worry and expense.

A splendid site for New Eden has been secured for the sum of $90,000 in Webster Groves, Mo. Of this amount the congregations in St. Louis and vicinity have promised to raise $50,000. A general plan showing present needs and future development has been prepared by prominent and reliable architects of St. Louis and submitted to the Board. The buildings which are indispensable and which must therefore be erected immediately will cost $535,000 approximately. This means that the members of our Evangelical Synod will be asked to contribute the sum of $285,000 in the very near future for New Eden.

The Building Committee consists of the Eden Board of Control, the Rev. Wm. Hackmann, chairman, and three laymen who by reason of their thorough knowledge of building operations are eminently qualified to fill the position. The preparation and direction of the financial campagn were entrusted to another special committee consisting of Rev. E. Jaeger, chairman, Rev. H. Vieth, secretary of the Budget Board, Rev. J. Kircher, treasurer of the Seminary Board and three competent laymen. In view of the urgent need and the fact that we are forced to build without delay, we express confidence that all pastors and congregations will rally whole-heartedly and with liberal contributions for the realization of a new and beautiful Eden.

Elmhurst

The new dormitory which was dedicated in February of this year is proving satisfactory in every way. A great need has thus been met, and we are now in a position to provide convenient and home-like quarters for our students at Elmhurst. Progress in making this institution a standard A. B. college can also be reported, another year's work having been added to the curriculum for the coming fall. When the next General Conference meets we trust the goal will be fully reached. It is evident that expansion brings increased responsibility. More lecture-rooms, more equipment, more instructors and more money must be provided.

Work on the present administration building is now in progress. When alterations are completed this building will be fire-proof, so far as it is possible to make it so, and will offer the required lecture-rooms and facilities for laboratory work. The cost involved will be $50,000 approximately.

Robinson Academy

Owing to the unexpected and unavoidable delay in building operations the opening of Robinson Academy could not take place on scheduled time and this fact reduced the number of students for the first year to a minimum. However, the work done by those who did attend was very satisfactory. Several members of our Seminary Board visited this new institution in an official capacity, and the report which they submitted is most encouraging. The prospects for the second year appear to be very bright. The local Board of Control is looking for an enrolment of fifty students, and a larger number we can not accommodate at the present time. The school building has been remodeled and much enlarged at a cost of more than $18,000 which sum is considerably in excess of the amount which was originally appropriated for this purpose. The pastors and congregations in the vicinity of Waco, Texas, where Robinson Academy is located, are manifesting a commendable interest in this new enterprise and we are confident that the further development of the school will prove a distinct blessing for our Synod.

The Training School

Our new Training School for Christian workers will be located at Cincinnati, Ohio. The Evangelical churches of this aggressive city have secured for this school a large and valuable piece of property for the sum of $100,000. Of this amount they have already raised $70,000 and the balance will, be forthcoming in the near future. This is indeed a notable achievement which merits our sincere appreciation and gratitude. The substantial and spacious building requires but few alterations to make it suitable for school purposes and the special commission is making every effort to open the Training School in October of this year. The current expenses which are estimated at $16,000 for the first year have been included in the budget of the Seminary Board.

These are some of our problems which the pastors and congregations of our Synod are asked to help solve. Co-operation alone can accomplish the task. Friends, we need your interest, your money and your prayers. May God help us to give these for the furtherance of this great cause.

F. Frankenfeld, chairman Seminary Board.

Home Missions

MOTTO: "America for Christ"

The Importance of Home Missions

Both from the viewpoint of the great need of missionary work, and of the strategic importance of home missionary activities in the great conquest of winning the world for Christ and his Kingdom, home mission work is one of the most important activities, if not the most important activity of the American Churches. From a denominational standpoint it means the strengthening and expansion of the denomination, in order to fill its place among the sister churches, from an interdenominational viewpoint it means evangelistic, educational and social uplift-work among the unchurched masses and the various groups and races in our land, who are not as yet won for God's Kingdom, to make America Christian for the friendly service of the world.

"He does most to christianize the world, who does most to christianize America."—Josiah Strong.

Evangelical Home Missions

This is the 63rd year of organized Evangelical Home Missions. During its history over 600 churches have been aided by home mission funds at a total cost of over a million dollars. Present day Evangelical home missions reaches 31 States and the Province of Manitoba, Canada. During the past year it touched 130 communities with approximately 100 workers in the field.

The main divisions of the Board's work are: Church Extension Work (planting and maintaining Ev. Churches, wherever needed). City and Immigrant Work. Country Church and Mountain Work.

Our main efforts were and are directed to Church Extension work, in other words, caring for the religious needs of the people of our own faith and nationality. This work showed a healthy growth during the past year. To the 16 new fields mentioned in our annual report to the Districts, 14 have since been added. In a number of cities surveys are under way with a view of starting new work. Several mission Sunday schools have already been organized. We find open doors almost everywhere in the large Evangelical centers, the smaller industrial cities, in some rural districts and especially in the frontiers, north, south, east and west. The fields for service lie all around us and are white for the harvest. We can increase our church extension work just as far and as fast as our resources in men and money will permit.

The same is true with respect to our City and Immigrant and Country Church and Mountain work. The progress along these lines has been slow, but still there has been some growth also along these lines of service. A second trained woman worker has been employed, a caretaker and superintendent for the Immigrant and Seamen's Mission in Baltimore have also been appointed. The community work in Southeastern Ohio, and the work among the oyster shuckers in Biloxi, Miss., are progressing nicely. Some preliminary work has also been done in the Ozarks with a view of opening that needed work as a special phase of our home missionary activites.

Our Financial Needs

The greatest handicap with which our Board had and has to contend is the lack of the necessary funds to carry on this large and increasing work. True, we always received enough money to keep our workers in the field, even if we had to borrow it at times, but ways and means must be found to adequately finance this important branch of our church work. We do not and cannot believe that our Evangelical people want us to retrench in our home missionary activities and we repeat the appeal made at our District conferences and through the columns of the Evangelical Herald. Evangelical Home Mission work is your work. Its advance awaits your contribution.

Stand by your home missionaries.
They are making many sacrifices.
They look to you for their support.
Do not fail them.
Oversubscribe the Budget.

Interest and Prayers

Above all, we need and kindly solicit your best interest and ardent prayers for the great and important cause of home missions.

W. L. Bretz, Executive Secretary.

The Extension Fund

Closely related to the home mission enterprise is the work of the Extension Fund Board, which is incorporated under the laws of the State of Missouri, and entrusted with the administration of the church extension fund, now representing a capital of approximately $247,000.

The original name, "Church Erection Fund," indicates the mission of the fund and the way in which it contributes to the extension of the Evangelical Church. Its purpose is to assist struggling mission churches in the erection of necessary church buildings. Assistance is given in the form of loans, granted to these churches under the most liberal conditions.

Churches receiving loans must, however, be incorporated, in membership with the Synod, in possession of a building site, and ready to give first mortgage security.

The Board has three sources of income:

- 1. A certain percentage of the offerings of Evangelical people for the denominational budget.
- 2. Return of loans with interest, it being the rule that churches receiving loans refund these with interest in annual installments, beginning one year after the receipt of the loan.

At the present time the capital of the Fund is distributed in loans among 145 churches throughout the United States and Canada. The number would be greater if the resources had been more adequate. As a denomination we have all reason to be grateful to the Lord for the phenomenal growth of the Church Extension Fund from the most insignificant beginnings. May we show our appreciation by doing everything possible to promote the further growth of this valuable auxiliary to home missionary activity.

In closing, the Board begs to announce, that in response to a request by one of the district conferences a sub-committee was appointed, the duty of which will be the study of church architecture with a view of assisting congregations seeking advice in matters pertaining to the erection of church buildings. The following pastors are members of this committee: Rev. K. L. Schneider, Rev. Wm. Hackmann, Prof. F. Mayer, Ph.D., D.D., and Rev. A. Ruecker.

_Theodore Braun, Sec.

Immigrant and Seamen's Mission

The problem of getting a successor to the late immigrant and seamen's pastor, Rev. O. Apitz, was, we hope, happily solved, when on April 1, 1923, the corresponding secretary of the Board, Rev. F. Giese, assumed charge of the superintendency of the Mission, retaining, however, the pastorate of Friedens Church, while Mr. and Mrs. F. Sauer became caretakers of the Home, occupying the former superintendent's apartment in the Home.

Many inquiries relative to immigration laws and traveling facilities are received, seamen in port must be visited and invited to the Home, while passengers from Europe who encounter difficulties in landing require the help and advice of one informed in these matters,—all of which shows that the work is getting well under way again.

Of course, the old time passenger service between Baltimore and Bremen, or Hamburg, has not been resumed as yet, which accounts for the unfavorable replies Pastor Giese is oftentimes compelled to send those who ask for information. Still, we are living in hopes of a better day and ask our people to keep in touch with the Baltimore Mission until then. It will be for the good of the cause. Kindly address all communications to: Rev. F. Giese, 819 N. Patterson Park Avenue, Baltimore, Md.

F. H. Klemme, chairman.

Our Foreign Mission Work

Recounting the total number of workers, we find that we have at this time: In India 24 persons (including nine missionaries' wives); in Honduras seven persons (including one missionary's wife); furloughed three, a total of 34. The workers in the field, however, caution us, not to be content with that number, but to increase it both in India and Honduras. In both fields some more men, and likewise women, are needed. How much do we, in the churches, desire to see the work done, souls called, lives renewed, Christ's Kingdom implanted? To the extent this desire is alive and eager will we increase our forces and support them with gifts and prayer.

Progress in India

The old stations were again occupied by missionaries in a fairly adequate way, and the Indian helpers-catechists, teachers and Biblewomen-wrought in united effort. One of the Indian pastors, Rev. Simon Bajpai, was called to the church above, the three others hold responsible positions-Pastor Gottlieb at Baitalpur; Pastor Paul at Mahasamudra; Pastor Isu Prakash at Sakti. A few of the weaker schools were closed, the work at the others was intensified, and special attention was given to the imparting of religious instruction and the control of the same through carefully planned examinations. Especial care was bestowed on the orphanages and boarding homes, where over 400 children experienced beneficial Christian supervision and training. Quite a number of these children are taken from the heathen conditions of isolated villages where, later on, upon their return, they are expected to exert a wholesome influence.-The Koehring Home for Destitute Women was transferred from Raipur to Parsabhader, where the rural surroundings afford better opportunities for quiet living, work in the field and garden etc. for the mothers, and wholesome conditions for the babies and children.

The most perceptible step forward was taken by the relocation of Mr. and Mrs. Feierabend, who moved some 80 miles eastward from Mahasamudra and opened a new mainstation, our seventh, at Khariar. They were kindly assisted by one of the greater zamindars (native kings) who donated 19 acres of ground and gave them the temporary use of a house; and after erecting some of the smaller buildings which afford them shelter for the present, Mr. Feierabend has begun the construction of a mission bungalow. The population appears openminded and willing to receive the Gospel.

Progress in Honduras

In spite of tedious delays and trying difficulties, the 13-acre plot of ground, just west of San Pedro, bought in 1922, has been occupied, and with its buildings, finished and in course of construction, is being made the base of operations. A portable building was removed from the former rented site and is used as a girl's boarding establishment. A second building affords school rooms. A native house on the place has been enlarged to serve as a dwelling for some of the workers, and the new mission house was brought to completion towards the close of the year.

While Rev. Dewald was occupied with building operations, the ladies conducted the school in its several branches, and Rev. Auler did evangelistic work, both in San Pedro and along the railroad as far as Puerto Cortez, 35 miles to the north. He preaches regularly once a month at two outstations; and a more definite outstation-work at Birichiche, 40 mills to the northeast, on the Ulua River, has assumed shape through the erection of a school and missionary's dwelling, without cost to the Mission, by a planter, Sr. Manuel Garcia.

A new worker, Miss Elsie Goepfarth, of Richmond, Va., joined the force in the fall.

Every single year's progress is to be followed up by further effort in the direction of the final goal.

Paul A. Menzel, Executive Secretary.

The Board of Religious Education

The task of promoting and developing the work of religious education in all its various phases was placed into the hands of the Board of Religious Education by the general conference held in 1921. This task represents one of the most important features of the Kingdom work within the sphere of the Synod's operations. It includes every activity and project having for its ultimate object the training of Christian leaders and the improvement of the standard and efficiency of religious education and training in our denomination.

One of the chief tasks with which the Board of Religious Education has occupied itself during the past year has been the effort to bring home to every Sunday school and to the teaching forces in our churches generally the imperative need of thorough-going and effective religious training. By every means at its command the Board has sought to inspire both pastors and teachers to accept the challenge of the present day and time, and to give to our youth such instruction and training as is adapted to their needs and which they must have in order to become active and useful Christians.

Predicated upon this need, the Board has sought to promote Bible conferences, teachers' institutes, schools of methods and related projects in various regions of the Synod through the past year. An outstanding feature during the past year was the third national Sunday school convention, held at St. Louis, Mo., June 28 to July 3rd. A total of 1330 delegates were registered at this convention. This convention should prove a valuable incentive to every delegate who attended it in reaching out for better things and higher aims. A further part in the ambitious program which the Board is seeking to carry out is represented in the work of conducting the Leadership Training schools. Four such schools were conducted during the past year, namely at Elmhurst, Ill., Newton, Kan., Biloxi, Miss., and Houghton, N. Y. It was first intended to conduct the last named school at Dunkirk, N. Y., but unfortunately the necessary building operations were delayed, and in the emergency, Houghton had to be chosen as the place of meeting.

The acquisition of the Dunkirk property marks an important step in the plans of the Board. This property is to be developed with all possible speed and eventually will become a training center for our young Eyangelical people. Building operations were begun last summer. The dining hall and several minor buildings are about completed. The one outstanding need at this point for the present year is the erection of an auditorium. It is estimated that this will cost $25,000. The third national convention endorsed the recommendation made by the Board that the Sunday school teachers and other interested members supply the means for erecting this building, and that it be designated as a memorial to our mothers, our first teachers in religion. A generous response to this appeal proves that it has met with popular favor.

The plans of the Board for the present year are not fully matured, but in the main they will follow the lines already laid down. Such details as will interest the public will be published from time to time in our church papers.

Ministerial Pension and Relief

In his conflict with the Pharisees and Scribes our Lord said: "But ye say, if a man shall say to his father or his mother, that wherewith thou mightest have been profited by me is Corban, that is to say, given to God; ye no longer suffer him to do aught for his father or his mother." Mark 7: 11, 12. Of course I would not for a moment compare the good readers of the Year Book with the Pharisees and Scribes in Jesus' day, and yet there is just now in our Church a certain danger that many might say "Corban" in regard to our Relief Fund, and that is why I quote this word of our Lord here.

We are in the midst of a period of building and extension. In our educational institutions great building operations have been and are being undertaken. Much is done for our young people who are active in Sunday school and society work, especially is a great deal being done to meet the needs of our students who are preparing for the ministry. And all this is right!

Our home and foreign mission boards are hard at work in extending the church and they claim a generous portion of effort and of financial resources. And this, too, is necessary and right.

All this work serves the purpose of keeping the tree of the Synod fresh and green and growing and fruitful. On every tree, however, there are also old, withering, diseased and dying limbs and branches, and these are our dear old invalid pastors, and the widows of the deceased pastors who with their families still dependent upon them, look to our Board for Ministerial Pensions and Relief for their needs and their care. Here is the danger that we might say "Corban" if we think only of the green vigorous and fruit producing branches of the tree, which promise production and fruitfulness for the coming years.

Thank God that our Lord and the whole Bible think otherwise. Let us, dear readers, be like-minded with them and not make void the word of God by our own traditions and opinions. True, our invalid pastors and the widows of pastors whom we are supporting, our aged fathers and mothers, can no longer produce, they are now living upon the wealth of the Synod. But have they not labored and do we not live from the labor they did in the days of their vigorous man- and womanhood? Are they not entitled to live upon the fruits of their labors, as we expect to do and must do in 10, 20, and 30 years from now? Do we not hope that the younger generation which will then be in active work will not say "Corban" to us but will gladly and willingly care for us when our backs are bent and our hands become weary?

Yes, they are living on the wealth of the Synod, and they bring to the Synod and to the individual members the rich golden blessings of the fifth commandment and of all similar promises of God. And everything depends upon the divine blessing, does it not?

The demands upon our Fund are still growing. The continuing high prices of all the necessaries of life compel us to raise the amounts given for relief, and so we have increased these again for this year, although only by five percent. Since February 1, 1923, all those pastors who have reached the age of 65 and are still serving congregations which pay less than $700 per year draw their pro rata pension. No one can doubt that such pastors need their pension, and surely no one of us will begrudge them what they are getting. At the present time 20 pastors are getting the benefit of this arrangement.

As a result of the tendency in so many churches to choose only young or at least younger men as pastors, and especially because of the rapid progress of English in our churches, it cannot be otherwise than that many older pastors who under conditions as they were five and six years ago could still have continued in the ministry, serving congregations and earning their own living, are compelled to apply for pension. Those who have not yet reached the age of 65 are especially unfortunate. All this helps to put a constantly growing burden upon our pension and relief treasuries.

The extent of our work appears from the fact that, for instance, for the payments due during the second quarter (May, June, and July) 308 checks were mailed which totaled about $12,000. The individual checks varied between $25 to $100, and those who draw $100 per quarter are wholly dependent upon these amounts, and most of them must pay rent in addition. What this means the thoughtful reader may figure out for himself by divinding $100 by 91½ days.

As I write two letters come to my hand, one of them from an invalid pastor who is without family or relatives and entirely without resources. He has served the Synod more than 30 years and has ways had churches which pay only a small salary. Gratefully he writes: "You write that you have allowed $306 for me this year. I thank you and the Board most heartily for granting my request. My weakness and affliction continues undiminished although the pain is no longer as severe; so that I may at least bear my suffering. Again I thank you most heartily!"

The other letter gives the reasons for a request for relief. This brother is nearly 81 years old, a widower and also without any means of his own, who is obliged to pay rent. He writes: "I was ordained in 1868 and have been in the active ministry without interruption since then, and in addition to this I have filled various official positions since 1881. I have always supported all branches of our work, including the Board for Pensions and Relief, and as I urgently need the highest amount you can grant, I herewith make this request. I deplore deeply that I must make this request, but I cannot help it. I shall probably not need the support very long, for if I live until October 13, I shall be 81 years of age. In his mercy the Lord will, I am sure, soon call me home." This aged and honored brother asks for a total of $400 per year, including pension and relief.

Now it is not at all a pleasure to write things like this. Such things are bitter herbs. But what shall I do? Bitter herbs do not grow on rich soil. Our invalids and widows of our departed pastors are now journeying through the wilderness of Mara and we of the Pension Board must cultivate this field. Pardon me, therefore, good reader, if what I offer represents bitter herbs; it is what I found on this soil. However, they say that bitter herbs are very wholesome. They are supposed to make the eye clear so that it may see the will of God and the need of the brethren; they are also said to warm and soften the heart and to make the hand willing to give.

But some flowers also grow on this field. They are humility, gratitude, and trust in God. And you, dear reader, and Evangelical fellow Christian, can help to make many more of these flowers grow and bloom, yea, even that an oasis may grow up in the wilderness and that our weary pilgrims may come from Mara to Elim. Such an oasis is our Pastors' Home in Blue Springs, Mo., another the Pastors' Home in Eden, near San Antonio, Texas, and we are told that the North Illinois District will also erect a number of bungalows for invalid pastors and widows of ministers, where they may enjoy free rent. This will have the added advantage that those who get the benefit of these bungalows will be able to live nearer to their friends and relatives.

The Pension Fund and the Relief Fund take care of this task in such a way that the Pension Fund is supported chiefly by the pastors, who pay their annual dues into it, while the Relief Fund is chiefly supported by the churches. The present pension for pastors is to be raised from $140 to $400 per year, and that of $116 for widows to $250, if it is possible to increase the present guarantee fund of $235,000 to $1,000,000. In view of this I say again, Let us not say "Corban"! Let us do the one and not leave the other undone.

J. Abele, Chairman.

The General Budget and the Forward Movement

We are fully aware that the name "Forward Movement" has met and is still meeting a great deal of determined criticism and that as a consequence the great cause which is represented by that name has suffered. But though we feel that the name ought to be changed, we must leave that for the next General Conference. In the meantime this short statement may help to pave the way for a reorganization and a renaming of that branch of our work which today is still officially known as "The Evangelical Forward Movement."

No work of any kind can be successfully carried on without a definite and detailed plan and no plan can succeed without proper information and instruction.

We have always had plans for our church work, we often had too many plans, which through lack of harmony caused confusion and misunderstanding. This confusion was increased because it was nobody's business to keep our people informed as to our plans, so that while some knew part of the plans, nobody knew all the plans and many knew nothing whatever.

It was the purpose to create a central office, which would tend to harmonize all the plans of all the boards and keep our people informed as to the meaning of these plans and offer them proper denominational helps for carrying them out.

This step, which would have become necessary in the course of time at any rate, and which had been considered for some time was made imperative by the changed world conditions with which we were of a sudden confronted.

That the newly created machinery did not work smoothly in every way, that there was a good deal of friction, that the required adjustments could not always be brought about quickly and adequately, is something that should have been expected.

If we now keep in mind just what it is that we expect of the Forward Movement, it should not be difficult to fit the organization harmoniously into the Synod body and find a name that states the case without causing opposition.

What We Want to Do

- 1. Present to our people detailed plans of all the branches of our work.
- 2. Keep our people informed of all progress that is being made under these plans.
- 3. Try to induce in our people a general approval of and cooperation with these plans.
- 4. Rally our people to a moral and financial support of the work as presented in these plans.

This last brings us to the work of the Budget Board, which is closely affiliated with the Forward Movement. It is of course selfevident that the carrying out of plans includes the expenditure of money and we would be laggard in our duty if we did not present the needs of the Kingdom to our people. This we do in the Budget. The Budget is the one generally and universally accepted method of handling money given and entrusted or desired and asked for specific purposes. We are convinced that all who have once made a study of the budget method will never want to be without it. Our office will gladly furnish material and helps for such study. Though we have never really raised our budget in full, we are glad to report that there is a growing inclination to study our plans and an increasing desire to raise the budget. Men are beginning to take the attitude that if we really love our Lord, the least we can do is to meet the needs of his Kingdom. We have no desire to do anything but help you to realize your obligation. We expect nothing but a sincere cooperation and a willingness to understand, that we may perfect our plans harmoniously and eventually reach our goal.-H. Vieth. Sec.

Social Progress

LOUIS WALLIS

EDITORIAL NOTE—This is the fifth annual article to be issued in our Year Book under the above heading. It is coordinated with the articles by the same writer published regularly in the Evangelical Herald under the title "Justice and Righteousness in the Land."

By the time this article is published the world will have moved exactly one half decade away from the Great War. Five years ago, at the time of the Armistice, people were thrilling with idealism and looking for the immediate advent of the New Jerusalem of Democracy which was to come down out of heaven. If, at that time, some prophet had been able to make his voice heard around the world, telling people how little their anticipations would be realized at the end of one half decade—what would have happened to the prophet?

"Progress" can be made in any direction—toward civilization or toward barbarism, toward spirituality or toward materialism, toward health or toward disease, toward wealth or toward poverty. What has been happening these five long years following the greatest war in history? Has human society been going up or going down? Or has it, perhaps, gone ahead in some ways and retrograded in other ways?

This department of the Year Book has nothing directly to do with the material, or physical, side of social progress. If it had, we should have to talk, for instance, about the triumphs of "radio," which, in the years following the war, have enabled people to cancel space for certain purposes. Or we should have to write about the automobile industry, which has enormously increased the facilities of luxury and industry since the war. These physical appliances affect social progress; but they are not what this department was established to consider.

Progress, for our purposes, refers to the relationship between human beings as affecting their moral and spiritual welfare. If we look at progress from this point of view, the truth begins to dawn upon us that the recent increase of purely material equipment, especially in evidence during the last years, has done little toward moral and spiritual elevation. It has not reduced the cost of living, nor cut taxation, nor lessened the conflict between capital and labor, nor arrested the portentous growth of public debt, nor helped the farmer. More farmers have Fords now than at the time of the Armistice; but their produce sells for less, and they must pay more for city-made goods. The last year has brought this disparity into bolder relief than ever. The Ford may be indispensable to the rural brother; and perhaps he could not live without it; but, somehow, it symbolizes progress that fails to progress.

This department and the corresponding articles in the Evangelical Herald have stood for the view that the World War has increased the force of social problems which were already pressing for solution long before the struggle broke out, and that, in consequence of the growing social pressure, we really are making progress in the study and understanding of social questions. Although conditions are bad in many respects, we are painfully learning lessons which will, in due time, teach us how to make things better. Our general standpoint may, therefore, be called "Long-range optimism and short-range pessimism."

And this is really the standpoint of the Bible. The title "Justice and Righteousness in the Land," standing at the head of our department in the Herald, comes from the prophet Jeremiah, one of the greatest outstanding figures in the spiritual history of the world. Jeremiah wrote, in the name of the Lord: "Run ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see if there be any that doeth justice, that seeketh truth, and I will pardon her" (Jeremiah, chap. 5, verse 1).

This prophet had a rather pessimistic opinion about conditions around him; but, at the same time, he knew that God's purposes were going to be fulfilled. This, it seems to me, is the way we should feel. A divine purpose of justice and righteousness is working out through all the trouble and confusion of a distracted world; and, after all, it may be that this conviction is the best and truest optimism.

Take the case of Europe in the last year. Even the nations that have had the closest experience of the Great War do not seem as yet to have learned much about the cause and cure of martial eruptions. Army and navy expenditures continue. France wages camouflaged war on Germany; and although Britain protests, this is only for prudential, business reasons—not on the ground of principle. There is just one thing alone that marks the difference between post-war and prewar Europe, and that is the increasing social pressure which has come from the recent conflict. Economic problems in Europe today are pressing for solution more than at any time in history; and this is making the people of Europe ask new questions and do a little thinking.

During the last year, Great Britain has dismissed the Lloyd-George government and installed an out-and-out Tory administration. Lloyd-George maintained a remarkable grip on the reins of power; but he had to go because he would not follow the policy demanded by the extreme Tories in his coalition cabinet. The standpatters of Britain wanted him to come out for the "reform" of the House of Lords, by which was meant the restoration of the veto-power of the upper branch of Parliament, so that the Lords could defeat money bills or tax measures passed by the more democratic House of Commons. This feature of the British constitution is an "amendment" resulting from a great crusade of Liberals and Laborites a short time before the war. Mr. George refused to betray the plain people of his country; and since he has left office, he has intimated that the question of land monopoly and taxation will have to be taken up and settled if Britain is to go ahead.

The Tory administration of Mr. Bonar Law, which succeeded the coalition ministry of Lloyd-George, did nothing of importance, except to carry on the ordinary indispensable functions of government in the maintenance of order. Mr. Law soon resigned, and was followed by another Tory, Mr. Baldwin; the situation being merely that of Tweedle-dum followed by Tweedle-dee. British conditions do not show much outward change since the war. But under-surface tendencies are moving toward some large development of policy. The general election, following the fall of Lloyd-George, saw a decline of Liberal representation in Parliament and such a marked increase of Labor party members that the latter is now the officially recognized "Opposition." We venture to forecast a new "Coalition" between Labor and the more progressively minded Liberals which will eventually carry a general election and assume charge of the British empire.

Only by some such political evolution can Europe escape from its present miseries. Tory administrations in Britain, France, Italy, Germany and other countries are simply unable to grasp the significance of economic and social conditions. Governments which think and move along the line of the present war-breeding social system will inevitably follow make-shift policies which accomplish nothing. Instead of showing capacity for grappling with post-war conditions. European statesmanship has merely gone from one patch-work arrangement or scheme to another, without doing anything of lasting importance. As we have said many times, however, governments cannot move much ahead of the popular mass. In last analysis, the real trouble with Europe is the same as the real trouble with America. As soon as the people have reached a state of greater intelligence and nobler feeling, the present political system will go out of business and a new statesmanship will emerge, giving effect to the principles of justice, righteousness and forward looking progress, both in the national and international fields.

American political conditions during the last year have been developing fundamentally parallel to the British. The Harding administration corresponds to the Tory regime. The overwhelming success of the Republicans in 1920 arose merely out of the fact that the masses of the people were tired of war and of Wilson, and had nowhere else to go except into the arms of the "Old Guard." But our elections of 1922 and 1923 prove that the people have not surrendered to standpatism. Just as we are writing these lines, the two old parties in the great state of Minnesota have been defeated by a new political combination of agricultural and working class elements called by the awkward name "Farmer Labor Party." Minnesota was at one time a dependable, stand-by, old-fashioned Republican state. But it began to slip during the Wilson period; and it is now represented at Washington by two radical senators. We hold no brief for the newly elected progressive "bloc" in Congress. Its platform may or may not be constructive. But all citizens who believe in fundamental justice and righteousness are rejoicing in the definite blockade which is now legally raised in the pathway of reactionism at the national capital.

Political movements are the reflection of underlying economic conditions affecting all classes of people—business men, laborers, farmers, etc. The economic state of this country during the last few years was bound to result in the dramatic reversal of political form which became general throughout the United States in 1920 has never which has been made certain by the recent elections. The depression been really overcome, so far as the average citizen is concerned. This department, in the Year Books for 1921 and 1922, laid emphasis on the nationwide attempt to cure hard times by the issuance of billions and billions of dollars' worth of public and private bonds. This process temporarily released and set in motion an enormous amount of money, and very largely brought back the war-time inflation under another form and by a different route. The metropolitan newspapers have hilariously greeted the advent of returning "prosperity"; while Mr. Harding, in imagination, has witnessed his triumphal re-election in 1924 on the basis of "normalcy" achieved.

The money set in circulation by the bonding process has gone into the construction of highways, school houses and bridges; the extension of equipment in connection with public utilities, such as railroads, electric lighting, telephones, gas and water; and into the enlargement and upkeep of commercial and industrial plants from coast to coast; while, at the same time, there has been a great building boom over the larger part of the United States. The so-called "surplus labor" which was thrown on the market in 1920 and 1921 has been temporarily absorbed; and money has been changing hands very rapidly.

But during this brief period of artifically stimulated and feverish activity, the tax burden has increased; ground rentals have soared; land speculation has been rampant; and the "overhead" of the business man, the laborer and the farmer has gone steadily upward. While we have, indeed, experienced more "business activity," it has meant less to the average citizen, who finds living conditions difficult. Nothing in the way of fundamental progress has been achieved by the enormous issues of public and private bonds; and, moreover, the socalled "revival" seems to be reaching and passing its "peak" at the time these lines are being written. We have never claimed to be able to make detailed or concrete predictions by the calendar in reference to economic and social tendencies; but we stand on biblical ground in emphasizing justice and righteousness in community life as a fundamental condition of social progress. If our nation, or any other nation, confines itself to tinkering with superficial measures while ignoring the divine principles of social morality which are written into the very basis and substance of civilization, it is not pessimism to say that God's outraged laws are bound to assert their power.

There is, indeed, something greater than mere "good business". something grander than mere "economic prosperity," and that is the knowledge of God speaking to us through the moral laws of social and personal life: "Did not thy father do justice and righteousness? He judged the cause of the poor and needy. Was not this to know me? saith the Lord." Jer. 22: 16. The prophet goes on to say in one of his later chapters: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel; and I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their heart will I write it." Jer. 31: 31-33. The writings of this wonderful prophet were very familiar to Jesus, who quoted from Jeremiah the saying which finally stung the reactionaries into the plot that ended in the crucifixion: "Is this house which is called by my name become a den of robbers?" Jer. 7: 11, (See Matt, 21: 13, etc.)

If we bear in mind what Jeremiah meant by "knowing God"; and if we think of this in connection with the New Testament principle that knowing God is "eternal life," John 17: 13; and if we think of these truths, not in the light of our theological creeds, but from the standpoint of religion considered as a matter of every-day life; we shall be prepared to make a new spiritual beginning. We shall see that God is reaching out to us now, in our own modern times, through the experiences of current history. While the sociological department of the Year Book and the Herald does not enter into the field of theological controversy, it is planted squarely on the biblical foundations which underlie all Christian creeds. The last year has witnessed a further advance on the part of the religious public toward a better grasp on the Bible as a factor in social progress. We are steadily moving toward a point where we shall begin to realize the solemn truth (already glimpsed by many saints along the ages) that eternal life is not primarily a future experience, but that it begins here and now in the degree that we know God as a vital, constructive power in the life of the world.

This thought is the reality underlying the religious revival of which many tendencies and intimations have appeared during the last year. Pronounced evidences of deeper respect for spiritual values have been shown recently by many persons in official station who formerly remained silent on religion. And not only are pastors and churches turning to a deeper study of Scripture; but new provisions are being made for Bible study in connection with the higher educational system of America, which has rested too long under the imputation of godlessness.

We close our survey, then, with that note of ultimate optimism which comes to us across the darkness and uncertainty of the times. It is true that international affairs are in confusion. We cannot hide this fact by foolishly turning away from it and refusing to acknowledge it. There are, as yet, no outstanding world-statesmen who grip the conscience of the peoples. Moreover, our own America herself is moving rapidly through troubled waters toward a new epoch of political experience whose outlines are still a mystery. And this new political activity grows directly out of the underlying economic stress which affects all classes in the nation—business men, laboring men and farmers. Amid these changes, religion is responding to the currents of the time, gaining a deeper hold and becoming a more positive element in the nationwide preparation for democracy and progress.

The Donation Party at Hustler's Camp

Hustler's Camp was somewhat exercised over the newcomer, who, in truth, did not look as if he belonged there. A number of men paused in their work and looked after the figure in rusty black as it ascended the rugged path on the hillside—a figure slender and slightly stooped, with gray showing plainly in the fringe of hair beneath the well-worn hat.

"He's come to a poor market," said a brawny fellow named Sam.

Little Jim leaned on his pick and looked wistfully after the retreating form. Jim was only a boy who had drifted into the camp, nobody quite new how or from where, and they had all fallen into the way of caling him "Little Jim," though he undertook a man's work with a courage and determination which showed that he intended to ask no favor.

"Ye can track that fellow all over the diggin's by these," grumbled Dirk, holding up a tract. "It's all the job I want to scratch along in this world, an' I hain't no time to 'tend to no other. It's gittin' monot'nous, and I wish he'd git out o' this."

"He won't till he's starved out, but that ought to be 'fore long," declared Sam. "He's gittin' thinner'n more bent over an' bleached lookin", and his old black coat shinier every day. If he hain't got sense enough to know when he's struck a place that won't pay, 'twould be a mercy to give him a hint."

"A good h'istin' one, that would skip him out lively," interposed another voice.

The irritable wish and rough jest were bandied about, until they gradually changed to a purpose—a plan born of the moment's caprice; the irresponsible mood of a crowd.

"The next time we git sight of him anywheres we'll lay down the law, an' give him twelve hours to skip out o' this."

Little Jim listened uneasily.

"You don't have to wait to git sight of him; I can tell you where to find him," he said, with sudden resolution. "He lives in that little old cabin up round the turn, 'cross the gully."

"Ho! come to stay, has he, an' got his nest all fixed? It's likely he'll change his mind. We'll go up there tonight."

Home missionary dwellings are not usually sumptuous in their furnishings, and the little cabin on the hillside had no soft hangings to shut out the gathering darkness. When the night fell, and the self-appointed committee of five drew near, the light from the small window shone out bravely, and the interior was clearly revealed. Such a picture as that was! No lone man bending over tracts or Bible, but a neat room, plain almost to bareness, indeed, but wondrously bright and homelike to those eyes which had seen nothing like a home for so long. There was a strip of rag carpet on the freshly scrubbed floor; a print framed in twisted branches on the wall; a homemade lounge, with a pale-faced woman reclining upon it; while a little girl, with grave, housewifely air, was brushing up the hearth.

Involuntarily the men drew nearer to the window and gazed. Their next movement might have been a silent retreat, but the little girl turning caught sight of some one, and eagerly threw open the door.

"Papa, is it you?"

"Sissy, is your pa in?" asked Dirk, lamely enough, as they found themselves discovered.

"Not yet, but we're looking for him. Won't you come in?" answered the small hostess, a trifle dismayed, but bravely rallying her hospitality.

The five men filed solemnly into the cabin. There was a limited supply of chairs, but with a rude bench and a little crowding they were all seated. The invalid on the lounge attempted to speak to them, but the weak voice failed to make itself understood by any but the watchful young nurse.

"Yes, mama; she wants to tell you," turning to the visitors, "that papa'll be home soon; but she can't talk much yet, 'cause she's been so sick. I guess it was the way the roof leaked made her take cold; but papa patched it, and I'm keeping house now so she'll get restful and strong. I can do it pretty well."

"Course, sissy; you do it first rate," declared Sam, as emphatically as if he had made a study of housekeeping.

She was only a plain, brown-faced little maiden, enveloped in a coarse check dress, but she and her surroundings seemed to have a wonderful fascination for these strange guests. When she attempted to replenish the fire, Dick proffered his assistance.

"My hands is bigger'n yours, sissy, see how much bigger!" and he gazed at the small fingers as if a child's hand were a marvel.

When for a few minutes she was silent one of the men nudged Sam and asked in a whisper if he couldn't "set her agoin' agin."

It was easy enough. She was a sociable little body and the few awkward questions drew ready replies—an artless story which unconsciously gave glimpses of many a hardship and privation. The palefaced mother only listened and smiled.

But presently the child broke off a sentence abruptly, and turned toward the door.

"There's papa!"

That the master of the house was surprised when he beheld his callers cannot be doubted. His face betrayed it, though he greeted them pleasantly. As for the guests thus suddenly recalled to a remembrance of their errand, they glanced furtively at each other, and little Jim out into the moonlight.

"Parson," burst forth Dirk, desperately, "we've come—we've come to—that is to say, if you'll 'pint a preachin' down to the camp we'll all be there, an' a lot more o' the fellers." He concluded with a savage glance at his companions, which challenged them to dispute him at their peril; but no one offered the slightest opposition. They drew a long breath of relief, indeed, as the astonished preacher made his appointment, and then quickly took their departure. Half way down the winding path a figure dodging behind the trees was anxiously watching their approach. Sam espied and pounced upon it, dragging Little Jim out into the moonlight.

"You young rascal, did you know there was a woman—a sick woman an' a little gal up there?"

Jim under the shaking chattered something that might have been an affirmative.

"Then why didn't ye say so?"

"'Cause I wanted ye to go an' see," ventured Jim, feeling that the hand on his collar was, after all, not a very angry one.

There was an usually quiet session around the camp fire that evening.

"When I was a youngster, 'way back East, they uster have donation parties, or somethin', for the parson—carried him slathers of things."

"That's the talk!" said Dirk, with a sudden light of his dark face. "Go up to Hard Licks tomorrow, an' scoop the store."

The proposition was carried by acclamation. Hard Licks was not a large town, but it had a high opinion of its own importance, and its shop windows were gorgeous. These latter furnished the chief suggestions concerning what would be useful in a poor missionary's family, and the buyers were lavish, so that it is safe to say that such a donation party was never seen before. More critical people might have objected that a crimson silk dressing-gown for the invalid and gay sashes for the sober little maiden did not harmonize with their surroundings; but the committee from Hustler's Camp was not critical, and indulged its eye for color regardless of expense. Useful articles by the quantity went with the finery, however, and the little cabin on the hillside was fairly inundated with comforts and luxuries.

"Our parson shall live like other folks' parsons!" said Sam, voicing the sentiment of the camp.

And the patient, persevering missionary? He looked up with eyes grown dim, and whispered to One beyond the clouds:

"Dear Lord, I wanted to win these souls for thee, and thou hast opened wide the door!"—The Independent.

Why Things Are So

We bow to our friends as a matter of courtesy, says the New York Sun, because that has been the sign of submission ever since man has known anything about himself, as a man.

Men and boys remove their hats as a sign of respect to girls and women, but the origin of the act lies in the fact that in the days when warriors wore helmets they doffed them before women to show their confidence in the gentleness of those who never fought.

Shaking hands is simply an elaboration of the open, gently proffered hand, which has always expressed friendliness. It shows the hand guiltless of a weapon.

The clenched first of hate shaken in the air is the gesture with which our savage ancestors brandished a spear, a hatchet or a lance.

Flinging the hands upward, with the palms out, which most of us do when horror struck, is part of the instinctive invocation to God for help and protection which primitive people always make when frightened or in danger.

The two buttons on the back of a man's coat serve no purpose now, neither do the buttons on his coat sleeves, but not so many generations ago they were in active use.

The buttons on the back allowed the flaps of the coat to be fastened so as to allow more play to the legs when riding horseback or fencing, while the slits in the coat "tail" were arranged for the sword.

Sleeve buttons are survivals from the time when duelling was frequent. In those less peaceful times, when roads were unsafe and robbers always to be feared, every gentleman was supposed to be able to defend himself at a moment's notice. To do this, he hastily unbuttoned the cuffs of the coat and pushed them up, so that his wrist would have better play in using the sword.

Resting as a Duty

It is just as much a duty to rest properly as it is to labor diligently. One owes it to himself, to those for and with whom he labors, and to the work itself. The best results are obtainable only when one's physical and mental machinery is functioning normally, and that is never when his body is wearied, his brain jaded, and his nerves "worn to a frazzle." The human machine is the only one to whose condition practically no attention is paid so long as it will run at all. No man would treat his automobile as he treats his body. No woman would neglect her sewing machine or vacuum cleaner as she neglects herself.

The fact is, most of us are afraid to rest. We have been brought up to regard idleness even for a brief period as one of the deadly sins, and to have a horror of being considered lazy; and so we drive on until the crash comes and we have to stop. Probably half the physical and nervous breakdowns might be avoided by a little more judicious resting here and there along the path of the duties of life.

The necessity of long vacations may often be obviated by the taking of numerous short ones. An occasional day or part of a day off from the office, a brief nap in the afternoon or a period of relaxation, a brisk walk in the open air or even the throwing wide open of the window and a practice for five minutes in deep breathing, a page or two from a good book to relax the tension and change the course of the mind's activities, a concert or an hour in a picture gallery, a merry romp with the children, a hearty laugh with one's friends—these are all in the line of real and profitable resting, and he is wise who appreciates their value and makes frequent use of them.

The objection at once arises: "I am a busy man, and I have no time for such things." To which the answer may pertinently be returned: "It is just because you are busy and must continue to be busy that you ought to find time for these things or for things like these. You cannot best do your business by unbroken and unrelieved busyness." There is a verse in the Psalms that most of us would do well to ponder: "He shall drink of the brook in the way; therefore shall he lift up the head." The habit of seeking refreshment from the many little brooks along the way of everyday life makes for continuance of strength and vigor.—Selected.

How to Look at Things

BY DR. G. F. PENTECOST

I went to see a lady once who was in deep trouble and darkness on account of the great afflictions of the Lord. When I went in she was working on a bit of embroidery, and as I talked with her, she dropped the wrong side of it, and there it lay, a mass of crude work, tangled, everything seeming to be out of order.

"Well," said I, "what is this your are engaged at?"

"Oh," she replied, "it is a pillow for a lounge. I'm making it for a Christmas gift."

"It should not think you would waste your time on that," I said. "It looks tangled, without design and meaning"; and I went on abusing the whole bit of handiwork, and belittling the combination of colors, and so on.

"Why, Mr. Pentecost," she said, surprised at the sudden and abrupt change of the subject on which we had before been talking, and at the persistency with which I opposed her work, "why Mr. Pentecost, you are looking at the wrong side."

"Turn it over."

Then I said:

"That's just what you are doing. You are looking at the wrong side of God's workings with you. Down here we are looking at the tangled side of God's Providence; but he has a plan, here a stitch, there a movement of the shuttle; and in the end a beautiful work. Be not afraid; only be believing. Believe him in the darkness; believe him in the mysteries. Let him that walketh in the darkness and seeth not the light, yet trust in the Lord God."

Are You Educated?

Mr. Edison's recent questionnaire excited much interest and no less comment. It has been copied by newspapers all over the country, criticized favorably or adversely, and parodies in many forms have been made upon it. It is largely a memory test, covering the field of what might be called miscellaneous knowledge of facts in the scientific world, but making no particular appeal to the thinking and reasoning powers, and no demands upon knowledge of the real and underlying facts of life. Mr. Edison's list of questions has, however, been of value in starting a trend of thought in the direction in which he aims. It is good for all of us sometimes to pin ourselves down to a definite answer to a direct question. Following is a list of questions proposed by a professor in the University of Chicago concerning the results in us of what we call education. It might be at once an illuminative and a profitable exercise for each of us seriously to think these questions through, and to write after each the answer that to his sober judgment seems to be candid and fair.

Has education given you any sympathy with all the good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public-spirited?

Has it made you a brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and keep them?

Do you know what it is to be a friend yourself?

Can you look an honest man or a pure woman in the eye?

Do you see anything to love in a little child?

Can you be high-minded and happy in the drudgeries of life?

Do you think that washing dishes and hoeing corn is just as compatible with high thinking as playing piano or golf?

Are you good for anything yourself?

Can you be happy alone?

Can you look out on the world and see anything but dollars and cents?

Can you look into a mud puddle by the wayside and see a clear sky?

Can you see anything in the puddle but mud?

The Philosopher of the Tubs

The morning was hot and enervating, the kitchen steamy and almost breathless, its tubs and baskets of soiled clothing plainly pointing to the day's program. It bade fair to be one of those days that would demand much and give little, or at least it would hold little but slavish work for some people. But the woman who would presently take command here was different. When she came back from the yard, where she had been putting up her line, a brave smile was on her face and a vivid rose nestled against her faded dress. It was the month of roses. Lawns and gardens were ablaze with them. And though life gave her little chance to rest in easy places or pause amid the beauties of the world, she would at least wear a rose in the work she must do.

It was a sane and a courageous way of viewing the situation. Because one's work does not lie amid the flowers is no reason why the one fragrant blossom possible should not be carried into the work. It is the sullen spirit of refusing everything where one cannot have all, that makes the way hard and doubles the load. The little washerwoman with her faded dress and bright rose preached unconsciously a sermon of cheer and good sense as she went to her work that day.

Just for Fun

She: "I want you to forget that I told you I didn't mean what I said about not taking back my refusal to change my mind. I've been thinking it over, and I've decided that I was mistaken in the first place."

He: "Do you really mean that Isabel?"

Old man (browsing in bookstore)—"Last Days of Pompeii"—what did he die of?"

Bookseller-Oh, I dunno-some sort of cruption."

There was a young man from the city, Who saw what he thought was a kitty; He gave it a pat And soon after that He buried his clothes—what a pity!

Father (from upstairs): "Helen, isn't it time for the young man to go home?"

Young Man: "Your father is a crank."

Father (overhearing): "Well, when you don't have a self-starter a crank comes in mighty handy."

The Story of the Postman

BY EDWIN TARRISSE

A very few persons, it is probable, know that the story of the postman is by no means a modern one, and that the history of the postal service and its employes extends to the days of the Romans, when the earliest known means of transmitting messages was by courier. Those admirable organizers marked by a "post" the place in the road where the relay of one runner by another was effected; thus they named our system long before it was born.

The first letter post seems to have been set up in the Hansa towns in the thirteenth cenury, in order to facilitate relations between the merchants of the various members of the Hansatic League.

The British postal system had its beginning in the sixteenth century and our own Colonial methods of handling mail were inherited from our British forefathers. Long before the people had any means of exchanging either personal or official letters, the king had established a system for conveying his personal messages and official documents by royal messengers. In the reign of King John that petulant monarch paid out a large sum for a postal service and charged it to the household and wardrobe accounts. Messengers who were thus intrusted with matters of state had to be above suspicion. They went the whole distance and were paid according to the length and dangers of their journeys.

When Edward IV found the Scots were too hot upon his trail he decided that he needed a system of communication between his own headquarters and those of his fighting forces, so he had horses placed at twenty-mile intervals on the road between England and Scotland. That was our present post-office system in embryo. Finally, in 1512, Sir Brian Tuke became the first postmaster-general of Britain, and personally took charge of all the royal messengers. Persons of less importance than kings had to arrange for the transmission of their letters by their servants, messengers, merchants or friends, but there is evidence that by the close of the fifteenth century regular courtiers between a few main points were employed.

In a privy council proclamation in 1603 the duties of mail carriers were made extremely arduous. The postman had to possess two leather bags, lined with "bayes," or cotton, for his letters; he must be obliged to toot a horn whenever he saw any one approaching; or at least four times in every mile; he might not delay more than fifteen minutes at any point, and he had to make at least seven miles an hour in summer and five in winter. Besides these requirements, there was one that he keep a record of the name and address of the sender and recipient of each letter.

In 1683 New England proposed to the British government that a post-office system be established in the colonies, as it was "so useful and absolutely necessary." The King paid no attention to the plea, but Richard Fairbanks, in the same year, set up an office in Boston to receive letters from ships. He undertook to deliver the letters received and charged a penny for each communication. He also received mail for outgoing ships, but no one was forced to send mail through his office.

Consider the progress made since those days. Nowadays we possess a system that specially delivers our eager and anxious words, carries our parcels, registers our valuables, banks our money or transmits it to pay our bills.

Today in many sections of our country the farmer has his daily paper just as the New York banker has his, and he has a superior advantage in that the postman who delivers it to him is his friend and may add verbal bulletins on items of local interest.

A thrilling story of the devotion of mail men to their duties is that of the pony express, the first rapid transit mail line across he 1,966 miles of prairie desert, snow-capped mountain peaks and alkali wastes between the Missouri River and the Pacific coast. It was established early in 1860 in order that the West might be kept more closely in touch with the North in view of the trouble brewing from the slavery question, and, although it had an existence of but a few years, it made the East and the West only ten days apart at a time of great danger to the Union.

The date of starting was to be March 26, 1860, and Forts Kearney, Laramie, Bridger, Great Salt Lake City, Camp Floyd, Carson City, the Washoe Silver Mines, Placerville, and Sacramento were to be the points of delivery of mail. In Saint Joseph, Missouri, eager and excited crowds gathered in the streets to see the first courier, the wiry, twenty-year-old Johnnie Frey, as he dashed away on his jet black steed for the first lap of the race of flesh, blood and determination against the desolate spaces of an unpeopled country.

These riders were clad in buckskin shirts, ordinary trousers, high boots and soft slouch hats, and were armed with sheath knives and Colt's revolvers and Spencer carbines. The best time they made across the trackless waste was in carrying President Lincoln's inaugural speech to San Francisco—seven days and seventeen hours.—Selected.

NEW EVERY MORNING

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new.
You, who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you—
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over;
Tasks are done and the tears are shed;
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever,

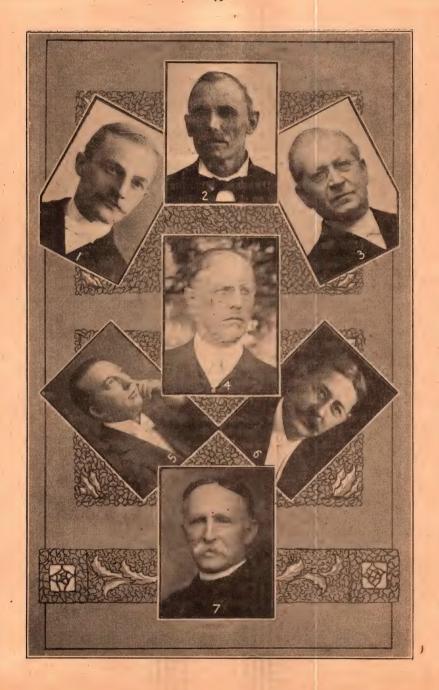

Bound up in a sheaf, which God holds tight,
With glad days and sad days and bad days, which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight,
Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot retrieve them, Cannot undo and cannot atone; God in his mercy receive, and forgive them! Only the new days are our own; Today is ours, and today alone.

Going to Church

You are "too tired to go to church?" That's shee nonsense. There isn't a place on the continent so restful as the church. You are going to lie around the house all day; freeze in a hammock; loll in a big rocking chair; go to sleep over a book. That isn't resting, that's loafing. Tell yourself honestly-did you ever see a loafer who didn't look tired all the time?

About a year ago I stopped in a Boston street to watch a group of laborers. It was noon hour. They had been at work all the morning digging a sewer excavation. They had eaten their dinners from the little tin pails and now they were "resting". Some of them were pitching quoits. They were workingmen "resting". And sitting on the curbstone watching them-too lazy to even stand up and look up and out at them-were the loafers who had been watching them work all the morning. These follows were too tired even to join the games by which the workers rested themselves.

You have no need to loaf all day Sunday. An hour in church; an hour of the quiet; the sermon, the reading; the uplift which comes from the new channels into which your thought, your mind is led, will rest you more, physically, morally, intellectually, than all the day spent in trying to "rest".—Rober J. Burdette in an exchange.

Art Glass Windows The Crowning Beauty of the Church

The whole aspect and interior of any religious edifice is largely contingent upon the character of its windows its windows.

A Splendid Treatise

has been prepared, giving not merely designs, but a comprehensive discussion of the Art from the remote past to the present day. It illustrates fragments of celebrated windows found in some of the old cathedrals of France and England, as well as modern Art Windows in which these designs, centuries old, have been used.

Those interested in beautiful

Those interested in beautiful churches should have a copy of "The Crowning Beauty of the Church." It is sent free. Merely mention this publication.

THE EVANGELICAL DEACONESS HOME AND HOSPITAL 4117-4125 West Belle Place, St. Louis, Mo.

is a training school and home for Evangelical deaconesses (not a "training school for nurses") who desire to serve the Lord in the sick, poor and aged, especially those in our Evangelical churches, in the spirit of Jesus Christ, and whose motive is that of gratitude and love. Our greatest need is more Evangelical deaconesses who serve in Christian mercy. Intelligent young women and widows between the ages of 20 and 36 years, with good health, and good character, are eligible for admission, and are urgently requested to enter the deaconess work.

The Hospital has a staff of very able physicians and surgeons, and nurses patients at the current prices. Poor patients are taken care of free of charge. If possible, deaconesses are sent out into families to care for the sick poor.

The German Protestant Home for Orphans and Old People 1852 West Grand Boulevard, Detroit, Mich.

Our orphans' and old people's home is situated in one of the most beautiful sections of Detroit. We cordially welcome Evangelical people who may come to Detroit to visit our institution. A Grand River Car to West Grand Boulevard will bring them right to the home.

The home is under control of the Michigan and Ohio Districts of our Evangelical Synod and is dependent upon friends within our Church for its support.

Evangelical Synod and is dependent upon friends within our Church for its support.

Our home is able to accommodate 125 children and 35 old people. Due to the greatly advanced prices of past years the conduct of our institution is dependent more than ever before upon the generosity of our friends in the Synod. Sooner or later a separate old People's Home will have to be built, We cordially solicit your interest and express our gratitude to the many friends who have heretofore supported us.

Bequests must be made in favor of: "German Protestant Home for Orphans and Old People, c/o Mr. Chas. A. Reibling, Treasurer, 1433 Baker St., Detroit, Mich." Other contributions will be gratefully received by the superintendent, Rev. J. B. Meister, 1852 W. Gd. Blvd., Detroit, Mich. Phone: Walnut 5381.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

FOUNDED BY D. L. MOODY IN 1886

THE OBJECT OF THE INSTITUTE is to train men and women in the English Bible, Gospel music, personal evangelism and practical methods of Christian work, so they may become Pastors, Bible teachers, Evangelists, Missionaries, Gospel Singers, Sunday school and Mission Workers, etc. The Course of the Day Classes covers two years, and during the year 1922-23 had an enrolment of 1,238. The Pastors' Course, requiring three years, includes Hebrew, New Testament Greek, Christian Philosophy, Denominational Church Polity and other advanced work. The Jewish Missions Course is especially designed to train young men and women for work among the Jews. This course also covers three years. The Evening Classes are correlated with the Day Classes, and give a corresponding training and diploma. Enrolment 1922-23, 861.

THE CORRESPONDENCE DEPARTMENT offers eight courses in Correspondence Bible Study—Synthetic Bible Study, Bible Doctrine, Scofield Bible Course, Bible Chapter Summary, Practical Christian Work, Christian Evidences, Evangelism, and Introductory Bible Course. For these a small fee is charged. Total enrolment for 1922-23, 10,047.

THE EXTENSION DEPARTMENT supplies evangelists, Bible teachers and Gospel singers for churches and missions, and conducts Bible conferences, music classes and evangelistic meetings in all parts of the country.

THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE MONTHLY is devoted to Bible knowledge and interpretation, news and methods of world-wide Christian work, editorial comment on current events and conditions, contending for the faith delivered once for all to the saints issued monthly. $2.00 per year to any address. Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., editor.
